Federal Loans for Consumer Urged by House Committee

'...But Definitely Canada Is Bisexual'

OTTAWA (CP)—It probably had to happen.

A movement has been launched for a royal commission on equal status for men.

John Kroeker of Ottawa, who calls himself a former civil servant, actuary and general boat-rocker, said today he sent a Valentine telegram to Prime Minister Pearson Tuesday with the message:

"Whereas in your wisdom you have established a royal commission to examine the question of equality for women and whereas Canada, whether or not it is bicultural, bilingual or binational is definitely bisexual, take note that a petition has been launched to request that you establish forthwith a royal commission to examine the question of equality for men."

The telegram said certain sensitive areas such as employment as bunny waitresses or topless dancers "show marked discrimination verging on total sexclusion of men.

"What man could make a go of gogo?"

Mr. Kroeker was dismissed from his post as an actuary with the federal government after he made statements critical of the Canada Pension Plan.

'No Opting Out' On Hospitals Says Bennett

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett Tuesday night confirmed that regional districts will be created throughout British Columbia unilaterally by the government to build hospitals.

"They will be set up exactly like school districts—and there'll be no opting out," he told reporters after he announced in the legislature that legislation will be forthcoming at this session.

Mr. Bennett warned the legislature that "there will be a little moaning and gnashing of teeth as there was when the school districts were set up."

But just as the 1945 Cameron report found that all municipal school boards had to be combined into present school districts "they (regional hospital districts) have all got to be in or the whole thing will collapse."

He recalled that Herbert Anscomb, former Coalition finance minister from Oak Bay, bitterly opposed inclusion of Oak Bay in the Greater Victoria school district and the same sort of opposition was repeated in other areas.

Outside the House, the premier said that the coalition government precipitated some of the controversy by establishing the school districts without first creating a financing authority for them to sell bonds in the money markets.

HEAD IT OFF

He said the Social Credit government overcame much of the lingering opposition in 1954 by creating the school construction financing authority. The government hopes to head off some of the reaction against the regional districts by its announcement last week that a hospital construction financing authority will be established with an improved provincial sharing formula for the new regional districts.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who previously denied there would be any compulsion attached to the new regional hospital districts, maintained his position.

He said the premier's reference to no opting out referred only to the establishment of regional districts as geographical units but local ratepayers would still have to approve acceptance of a hospital construction function for such districts by a referendum.

VOTE AGAIN

After that, they still would have a vote on each hospital construction program just as they do with school construction programs.

He said that probably 25 to 30 regional districts would be

'SAVAGE' SENTENCE PROTESTED

LONDON (CP)—Home Secretary Roy Jenkins has been urged to intervene in the case of a young woman who, convicted of driving while under disqualification, was sentenced to three months—which means she will have an expected baby in jail.

"A most savage sentence," says the Daily Express in a scathing editorial.

Lillian Baker, 22, burst into tears Tuesday when she received the three-month sentence at Bracknell, Berkshire, for driving while disqualified.

Magistrate Leonard Hackett told Mrs. Baker:

"Your children will be taken into care and all arrangements will be made for you to give birth to your third child at Holloway prison."

CARRIED INSECTS

Roaming Satellite Returns

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — An errant U.S. satellite apparently landed in Australia today after carrying insects and other organisms on an unscheduled nine-week trip through space.

Royal Australian Air Force planes reported picking up the 280-pound capsule's radio signals northwest of Kalgoorlie in the remote state of West Australia.

The report came shortly after the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) laboratory at Sunnyvale, Calif., announced the capsule had re-entered the atmosphere on its 999th orbit around the earth.

The capsule contained 13 experiments, including insects and other organisms, when launched.

"Most of them froze once the support system, planned for a three-day trip, terminated," the NASA spokesman said. However, he added that the material recovered would still be valuable in research.

ONE DEAD and nine injured was the toll when an explosion and fire gutted this apartment house Tuesday night in the Montreal suburb of Mount Royal. The victim is believed to be a young girl. No other details were released by officials. (CP Wirephoto.)

Hanoi Area Bombed, Says Russian Press

Times News Services

SAIGON—The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Hanoi that American planes bombed areas around the North Vietnamese capital at noon today.

Tass said Hanoi rumbled to the sounds of heavy anti-aircraft guns and bursts of rockets as American planes swept in over the city and bombed and strafed industries and "populated localities" around Hanoi in bright sunshine.

U.S. REPLIES

Tass did not say the planes bombed targets inside the city.

(The Pentagon said no targets closer than 35 miles from Hanoi and 15 miles from Haiphong were listed on reports from the Vietnam command today. The targets included barges 15 miles southeast of Haiphong and railroad yards 35 miles south of Hanoi and 45 miles southwest of Haiphong.)

South Korean marines today killed 243 Communist troops in a savage pre-dawn battle, using karate blows to chop down attackers who breached Korean defences.

It was the South Korean's biggest engagement in the war and one of the largest full-scale Communist assaults in recent months.

South Korean military headquarters said about 500 troops of a North Vietnamese battalion and a supporting Viet Cong guerrilla battalion launched a human wave assault against 150 men of the South Korean 2nd Marine Brigade.

CHUNG ON VISIT

The battle, staged in ricelands about eight miles northwest of Quang Ngai, 330 miles northeast of Saigon, coincided with the arrival in South Vietnam of South Korean Premier Il Kwon Chung for a four-day official visit.

Meanwhile in Moscow, Pravda accused Washington of deliberate lying when it declared that North Vietnam had shown no desire for a peaceful settlement during the Lunar New Year ceasefire.

American spokesmen justified the renenwed bombing by saying they had received no sign that Hanoi wanted to move toward a peaceful settlement, the Communist party daily says.

In a dispatch from Washington, Pravda says President Johnson "had completely ignored Hanoi's proposals" which hinged on the end of bombing raids on the North.

Moore Returning To Vietnam

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Victor Moore, Canadian representative on the International Control Commission, has returned to Saigon after talks in Ottawa.

His mission is to keep open the channel of access to Hanoi, it was learned here today.

His return to Vietnam Saturday was a surprise development. Earlier it had been announced he had completed 14 months in Vietnam, his tour of duty, and his successor will be Ormond Dier, who is scheduled to proceed to Saigon on March 1.

With Mr. Martin convinced the time is "ripe" to push ahead with negotiations to try and bring an end to the fighting, Mr. Moore was sent back and will be there until his successor is ready to take up the assignment.

Mr. Moore's return to Saigon was one more development in the strenuous behind-the-scenes efforts External Affairs Minister Martin has been making to get the combatants to the bargaining table.

Pentagon Stormed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The main doors of the Pentagon were locked for about half an hour today when a shoving, shouting crowd of about 2,500 women tried to storm the entrance, protesting the Vietnam war. The doors were re-opened on the orders of Defence Secretary Robert McNamara, who sent word that assistant secretary Thomas D. Morris would see a delegation of six of the demonstrators.

Jet Pilot Killed

COMOX (CP) — AN RCAF training jet from this Vancouver Island air base crashed today about seven miles south of here. The pilot was killed. He was not immediately identified.

The air force said the aircraft was a CL41 Tudor, a 500-mile-an-hour trainer that was being flown by a member of the Golden Centennaires, an air force acrobatic group training here.

A spokesman said two Tudors were flying together over the Forbidden Plateau area when one of the aircraft crashed.

No Agreement

QUEBEC (CP) — A meeting early today between Premier Daniel Johnson and representatives of striking Quebec teachers ended with no agreement on a new proposal by the teachers to end the walkouts without passage of a government bill which would force them back to classes and remove their right to strike for 18 months.

Low Income Aid In Poverty War

OTTAWA (CP)—A parliamentary committee today recommended that the federal government guarantee low-interest, long-term bank loans for low-income families.

The proposal was included in a wide-ranging report on consumer credit tabled by a joint Senate - Commons committee after more than three years' study.

It said the consumer loans for families with incomes of $4,000 or less were necessary in the war on poverty.

Roundly condemning the credit practices of some businesses, the committee urged full disclosure of all interest and service charges at the time of sale.

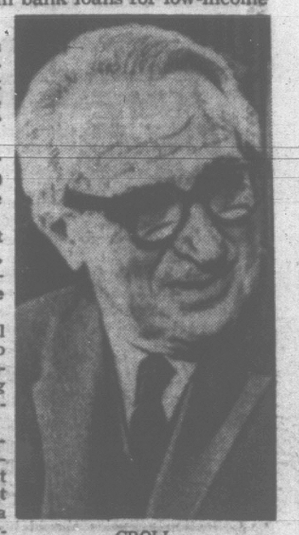

The committee urged federal and provincial governments to join in writing the recommendations into law, and in backing them up with adequate inspection and review machinery.

It sharply criticized so-called revolving credit plans operated by many big department stores, in which buyers do not learn until many weeks after a purchase what the monthly carrying charges will be.

"The game appears to be one in which all the cards are in the hands of one player — the seller," the committee said.

Its main recommendation was that "the total cost of credit expressed both as a lump sum and in terms of simple annual interest," be given the user of any time-payment plan at the time of sale.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Senator David Croll (L—Ontario) and Ron Basford (L — Vancouver-Burrard), made the recommendations in a 40,000-word report tabled in both houses of Parliament.

CROLL
. . . bears his stamp

It said consumer credit is a useful facility for purchasers and a growing factor in business, when used properly.

Essential Purchases During Need

In fact, the committee proposed extending the field by having the federal government guarantee bank loans at low rates of interest and long repayment terms for families with incomes of $4,000 and less. This would help them make essential and thrifty purchases in time of great need without incurring the heavy cost of commercial consumer loans.

But the committee came down heavily, and tartly, on consumer loaning practices that might cripple an imprudent buyer.

It did not recommend a specific ceiling on interest rate and service charges, but said the government should consider one. The committee, however, called exorbitant the interest of 18 per cent a year and more involved in some department store revolving credit plans.

Other main recommendations:

- Extend the existing federal Small Loans Act to include loans up to $5,000, instead of $1,500, at low monthly interest rates.
- Extend scope of anti-combines legislation to regulate manufacturers, distributors and dealers of products, such as automobiles, in the operation of their own sales financing concerns.
- Require finance companies to assume obligations to repair and service faulty goods when they buy promissory notes or other retail finance contracts from vendors.
- Allow the buyer three days to reconsider purchases made on credit from canvassers or in other off-store premises.
- Set a maximum rate of interest that may be charged in financing used car purchases, and establish central registries recording the history of each automobile.

Senator Croll the Sparkplug

The committee of 12 senators and 24 MPs was given its assignment to examine the consumer credit field Nov. 8, 1963. It had numerous changes of personnel, but Senator Croll remained its sparkplug throughout and the report showed signs of his energy.

Since jurisdiction in the broad field of consumer credit is divided between the federal government and the provinces by the British North America Act, the committee's recommendations were made generally to all governments. Some provinces now have interest disclosure laws.

Two main problems in the use of consumer credit were emphasized in the 3¼ years of hearings, the report said.

"The first concerns the troubles besetting those who buy on credit without understanding the price they are paying for borrowing.

"The second concerns the plight of low-income families who are from time to time in desperate need of credit for necessary goods or services but to whom commercial credit is either not readily available or not available at all."

The report made repeated reference to the problems of low-income families who become mired in debts from which they can never hope to extricate themselves.

"We recommended that the federal government make available, through the regular banking systems, guaranteed consumer loans under specified conditions to all with annual family incomes of $4,000 or less.

"The loans would be repayable over an extended period and would bear a low rate of interest. They would be made only for provident and produc-

CIA Paid Millions to Students

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency has supplied millions of dollars in secret financial support to at least three youth organizations in addition to the National Student Association, the Evening Star reports.

The state department acknowledged Tuesday that the government's top espionage and intelligence agency had for more than a decade financed operations abroad by the NSA, the largest college student organization in the United States.

But the reported CIA support of the other three groups had not previously been disclosed. The Star identifies the organization as the U.S. Youth Council, a confederation of 36 political, religious, student and service youth groups with headquarters in New York; the World Assembly of Youth, a confederation of national youth groups from 54 Western and non-aligned nations; and the International Student Conference of Leiden, Netherlands, a similar confederation of about 60 national student organizations from Western and non-aligned nations.

The newspaper says CIA funds for those organizations, totalling millions of dollars during more than a decade, were channelled through foundations. It identifies the principal donor to NSA and the three other groups as the Foundation for Youth and Student Affairs in New York.

The CIA had no immediate comment on The Star story.

The report of additional CIA support came amid protests and demand in Congress for a prompt investigation of the agency's ties with NSA.

In another development, the New York Times said President Johnson intervened in the controversy and instructed the CIA Tuesday to close out all secret programs of aid to student groups. A White House spokesman denied the report.

Within the four organizations, The Star article said, the members carried on a limited amount of intelligence work for the CIA.

Deadly Gas Threat Ended At $3 Million Dock Blaze

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—A $3,000,000 waterfront blaze was brought under control late Tuesday night after firemen used dynamite to choke off the fire that threatened to spread to a $100,000,000 pulp plant.

The blaze at one time threatened to release a deadly cloud of chlorine gas over this northern coastal city, prompting fire officials to issue an evacuation warning that stood for more than an hour.

The warning was called off when powdermen dynamited 1,000 feet of the flaming wharf, preventing the blaze spreading from the 3,000 - foot dock to three chlorine tanks at the pulp mill.

Civil defence authorities said if the fire had reached the tanks they would have exploded and prevailing winds would have carried the gas to Prince Rupert from the Columbia Cellulose Co., site on Watson Island, 12 miles to the east.

Fire chief Willis Hill of Prince Rupert made the decision to order the alert.

"Everybody in Prince Rupert could have been wiped out," he said.

"That chlorine gas is dynamite. It's really dangerous stuff.

STARTS NEAR WAREHOUSE

The blaze broke out near a warehouse on the long, narrow company dock late Tuesday afternoon. By the time fire crews arrived, flames were racing toward the landward end and three large chemical tanks located 200 feet from the end of the wharf.

Firemen called for 20 cases of dynamite to prevent the blaze from reaching the shore while civil defence and pilot officials used radio and television to warn of a possible evacuation.

Two separate charges were placed and blew out more than 1,000 feet of the dock. Firemen, police and company officials scrambled for shelter when huge chunks of blazing wood slashed into the water near to shore.

Two oil barges tied alongside the wharf were destroyed, but no deepsea vessels were loading at the time. There were no injuries but Columbia Cellulose estimated the loss of dock facilities at more than $3,000,000.

A spokesman said welding equipment was in use at the warehouse at the time the fire started and this could have sparked the blaze.

tive purpose related to the preservation of home and family. The maximum size of such a loan would be $1,500."

The proposal, the committee said, would help in the fight against poverty by relieving vulnerable low-income families from tremendous economic, social and psychological loads.

It also recommended budget advice and counselling in money management for all potential credit buyers.

This would include illustrations of debt consolidation, reasonable debt positions for low-income individuals, safe levels for credit buying according to income, and the nature and extent of consumer protection under the law.

Financing of used cars has become a social problem, the committee said. It cited cases of family breadwinners committing themselves to time payments for cars that won't run, and having no recourse against the sellers.

"Although we have not decided on any specific annual interest rate in respect of credit transactions which would in all circumstances be considered exorbitant, it would appear to be in the public interest to fix some such upper limit," the report said.

"Because of the tremendous increase in recent years in the use of open-end accounts of various types — sometimes called revolving accounts, cyclical accounts, easy-payment of budget accounts—with no statement to the customer of the annual interest rate at the time the purchase is made, and with a minimum effective annual interest rate of some 18 per cent, but no effective ceiling, we urge that immediate consideration be given to this important matter.

Accounting 'Mystery" a Danger

"An accounting system which is clothed in mystery is a potential danger to those of limited income."

Department store and other retail executives appearing before the committee said the revolving accounts are popular with customers and more economical to operate for the stores.

But they said it was impossible to quote a specific rate of interest applicable, since the accounts can run along for years as long as some monthly payments are made and new purchases added to the accounts.

The Croll-Basford committee, currently engaged in a study of consumer prices and economic trends, said in an interim report on prices in December that there should be a continuing committee of the Senate and Commons to review consumer affairs and the state of the Canadian economy.

There also should be a continuing federal-provincial committee of government technical experts to maintain uniformity of consumer credit law and eliminate abuses and loopholes in it.

Among more technical recommendations, the committee said there should be a standard form of agreement drawn up by some government agency and distributed to all dealers and reatilers, establishing basic rules for all sales of goods on credit. A copy should be given to every purchaser.

Allow Full Payment Before Term

Every user of retail credit should have the right to pay off his debt before the agreed term, without penalty and with proportionate rebate of prepaid service charges.

Collection agencies should be regulated and supervised to prevent harassment of the poor and unsophisticated.

Agencies should be prohibited from obtaining wage assignments from debtors. And debtors should give credit grantors wage assignments only in self-contained documents separate from the sales contract.

Reviewing the testimony given in 19 public hearings, the committee said that about 20 per cent of Canadians had incomes below the level at which they could afford commercial loans of consumer credit.

But consumer credit was more likely to be required by lower-income groups, and there was a danger they would become mired in debt.

It said that nearly 75 per cent of the business done by finance companies is with people who already are in debt to a small loan company or other lender.

Through refinancing and debt-consolidation deals, interest payments can pyramid. The committee found that borrowers actually receive in cash little more than one-third of the amounts debited to their accounts, and for which they are liable.

The committee said consumer credit outstanding at the end of 1965, the latest year for which it had full figures, amounted to $7,000,000,000; compared with $678,000,000 in 1948. The amount is increasing annually, as a percentage of personal net incomes and ratio to gross national product.

formed initially but ultimately the entire province would be carved up into regional districts. The regional boards would be composed as now of representatives from components who hold elected office.

There now are 11 voluntarily-established regional districts—including Greater Victoria—and five of them have hospital construction as one of their functions.

Both Mr. Bennett and Mr. Campbell said the government has not decided yet whether the 11 existing regional districts will remain intact or whether they will be reconstituted as rearranged units.

Mr. Bennett emphasized that "in my mind there is no other purpose than hospital construction just as there is only school construction in the school districts.

"But they could be used for other things if the people wanted—that's up to them. I have no other thing in my mind at this time."

The regional districts would not necessarily have the same boundaries as school districts, although some might, he said.

On average, they will not necessarily be larger than school districts either although there will be fewer than half of the present 87 school districts.

He said the regional district legislation will be complex and it will be some time before it is prepared, but it will be brought in at this session.

However, the legislation setting up the hospital financing authority will be brought in soon because this is primarily a paper device for dealing with the bond market.

He said he hoped the financing authority would be able to raise funds for hospital construction projects already under way "where they have been financing by bank borrowings and have not yet floated bonds of their own."

The premier said it was difficult to estimate how much funding the financing authority would undertake in its first year of operation but he guessed "about $25 million."

Besides construction, he said regional districts could use the financing authority to raise money to buy private hospitals so they could qualify as public chronic care institutions for the $1-a-day B.C. Hospital Insurance coverage.

Mr. Bennett said the bond issues funnelled through the hospital financing authority would grow because the new formula would cut local contributions from 44 to 40 or even 20 per cent, depending on the scope of a hospital program and the mill rate needed to raise the local share.

overseas representatives and similar reports on foreign student or youth leaders visiting the United States would be forwarded to the agency, it added.

Eight Democrats in the U.S. House of Representatives Tuesday urged an inquiry "at the highest level" into the CIA's support—estimated at $200,000 a year during most of the last decade—of NSA, a 1,300,000 member group with affiliations at 300 campuses.

Chairman Sam Brown and other members of the NSA supervisory board flew to Washington for an emergency meeting. Brown said Tuesday night it "comes as a shock" to find the board was "only the policy-making body on the secondary level."

Asked who was the top policy-making body, he said: "The CIA."

The Washington Post quotes an unidentified association official as saying: "Every year the CIA picked out a man or two that it could trust and told them about the undercover funding" of the association. The source said some of these young men later joined the CIA, often acting as liaison agents to the student group.

Last spring the CIA was accused of infiltrating a Michigan State University police training program in Vietnam. University officials denied knowing about it but ended the contract because of the suspicion aroused.

In Baltimore last December, a federal court dismissed a $110,000 slander suit against a CIA agent, declaring he could not be forced to testify because it might compromise national security.

The claimant, Erik Heine, a naturalized Canadian from Toronto, said his standing in an Estonian veterans organization had been damaged by a CIA man who allegedly called him an agent of the Soviet secret police.

The CIA's link to the National Student Association was brought to the surface Tuesday through newspaper advertisements by Ramparts magazine calling attention to a story on the relationship in its March issue.

Spokesmen for the association and the state department later confirmed the secret pact. Allen W. Dulles, who headed the CIA when the link was forged, said it was a response to widespread Communist influence in student organizations abroad during the early 1950s.

Excellent Pictures

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI)—Lunar Orbiter 3 today returned to earth "excellent quality pictures of the moon's surface as the spacecraft's cameras searched for an ideal landing site for America's Apollo astronauts.

A spokesman for Jet Propulsion Laboratory said the Madrid, Spain, tracking station had confirmed that the first three photographs received there from the spacecraft were "excellent."

MAO ENEMIES SEEKING SOVIET AID

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Hong Kong Star said today a top Red Chinese general has been holding secret talks with Russia on possible Soviet aid to forces opposing Mao Tse-tung.

The Star, a sensational English-language newspaper, identified the Chinese general as Gen. Kwok Pang, a chief aide to Gen. Wang En-Mao, military commander of the northwestern Chinese province of Sinkiang, where Peking's nuclear arsenal is stored.

Wage Offer Accepted

MONTREAL (CP) — About 5,000 striking manual workers employed by the City of Montreal today voted to accept wage increases ranging from 63 cents to $1.22 an hour in a one-year contract. The men also agreed to return to work later today, ending a five-day strike.

100 Labor MPs Protest U.S. Move

LONDON (Reuters) — One hundred Labor MPs called on the British government Tuesday to dissociate itself from the United States' resumption of bombing of North Vietnam.

Apparently not satisfied by a speech by Labor Prime Minister Wilson to the 630-seat Commons that peace could not be obtained by "dramatic declarations," the motion put before the House read:

"This House condemns renewed U.S. bombing of North Vietnam which so flagrantly undermines the peace initiatives of U Thant, UN Secretary General, and calls upon the government unequivocally to dissociate the United Kingdom from this action."

Observers doubted the motion would reach the floor.

WCB Can't Pay Miners' Claims

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—A government - appointed review committee, which studied the Workmen's Compensation Act, has termed the lung cancer incidence among Flourspar miners at St. Lawrence, Nfld., a "national disaster" and called for the "fullest possible investigation."

The report, tabled in the legislature, said it heard an "extraordinary" brief from Rennie Slaney of St. Lawrence, a miner for 20 years, in which he relates "ghastly" figures of 84 deaths among miners in the Burin Peninsula community of 2,000.

About a dozen of the deaths were due to heart disease and the remainder were attributed to lung ailments, the report says.

"According to him (Mr. Slaney), in only some 25 cases has any compensation to dependants been paid. He gives also another list headed 'those alive and unable to work.' It contains 13 names and he says that in six cases compensation was paid."

Irving Fogwell, chairman of the compensation board, told the committee he had recorded 34 deaths from lung cancer among the miners and about 20 due to other lung diseases between 1952 and 1965.

However, "cases that occurred before 1951 are not included."

". . . But it seems to use those given by Mr. Slaney are much nearer the truly ghastly total than the 50 odd in the board's files."

The committee said "the only recommendation we feel we can make in the regard is that the act be ignored altogether and forgotten. The tragedy of St. Lawrence, in its very dimensions and character, has far exceeded the sphere and scope of the act. On the ground of cost alone, it is impossible to apply it.

"If every claim that has really been created were evaluated, the assessment of all the industries in Newfoundland, not merely the mining industry, would be insufficient. The whole accident fund simply could not bear it.

Deposit Insurance Bill Pushed Through Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — The provinces cracked the whip and the Commons responded Tuesday night by giving third and final approval to a bill establishing the Canada Deposit Insurance Corp.

All provinces except Quebec have urged speedy approval of the measure in tue wake of failures by the Prudential Finance and Atlantic Acceptance firms and the possible adverse effect on Canada's financial reputation.

The bill, which now requires only Senate passage and royal assent before becoming law, protects demand and term deposits with a limit of $20,000 for each account.

It makes deposit insurance compulsory for chartered banks and federally-incorporated trust and loan companies.

Provincially - incorporated trust and loan companies may join voluntarily with the consent of their provincial government.

All provinces except Quebec are expected to permit entry of their near-banks and Finance Minister Sharp has said he is optimistic Quebec's reluctance can be changed.

The government had to bat down two opposition amendments in recorded votes, and talk MPs into withdrawing two others, before gaining passage of the bill in committee of the whole and finally, on third reading.

An NDP amendment challenged the provision that allows provincial governments to veto bids by near-banks to come under the legislation. Despite Conservative support the amendment went down 46 to 27.

An amendment by Gilles Gregoire (Ind — Lapointe) that would have boosted the power of a province to set regulations under the bill was defeated 78 to 3.

After five hours' debate the insurance bill passed and the House moved to consideration of a resolution to provide for a tax increase—as announced in the mini-budget in December—to meet the cost of the supplementary old age pension.

Debate on this resoution was to continue today.

Mr. Sharp said the provision giving provinces the right to veto entry under the insurance bill was put in "purely for diplomatic reasons." The act needed co-operation of all provinces, especially Quebec.

Mr. Sharp said Quebec Premier Daniel Johnson had asked Prime Minister Pearson during the weekend to keep the provincial veto in the bill.

Marcel Lambert (PC — Edmonton West) repeatedly asked for clearer definition of the term deposit in the bill. Mr. Sharp said the government needed time to examine the variety of financial instruments used by near-banks before defining the term.

He promised that after talks with those concerned, an order-in-council would be passed and sent to a Commons committee where opposition MPs could discuss it.

Appeased, Mr. Lambert withdrew a proposed amendment.

The legislation, as well as covering individual accounts of up to $20,000, makes available a fund of $500,000,000 in the event of a serious shortage of cash facing a member institution.

Under the Maple Leaf

THE STRANGE PREDILECTION of Premier Bennett and his cabinet ministers for flaunting their lapel maple leaves while voicing anti-Canadian sentiments is becoming so prevalent that it must be the result of a deliberately contrived pattern rather than the isolated whimsies of free-spieling, parochial-minded, back-country philosophers.

A long-suffering British Columbia public had become used to the unpatriotic grotesqueries of Mr. Loffmark, whose recorded stand is that "it wouldn't be the end of the world" if British Columbia were absorbed into an American-dominated customs union with Washington and Oregon. But the present legislative session has brought out a fresh rash of peevish railing against Canada and its government's national policy, and a corresponding gush of pseudo-separatist boasting which leaves the people of this province—both as British Columbians and as Canadians — embarrassed by the published sentiments of men who have been elected to positions of authority.

Mr. Kiernan, Mr. Gaglardi, even the relatively stable Mr. Campbell have got into the game in recent days, extolling Canada and their own Canadianism in one breath but scorning and decrying the very roots of our nationhood in the next.

For whom does Mr. Kiernan speak, for instance, when he says that "we will always be prepared to make our fair contribution to Canada, but we cannot accept the progressive erosion of our rights or our traditions . . ."? Who are represented by the "we" in such an utterance—Mr. Kiernan and his Social Credit cabinet colleagues? Certainly not the people of British Columbia, who do not see their rights or traditions being eroded by some foreign-seeming Canadian enemy.

Mr. Kiernan even stoops to the discredited ruse of attempting to picture us as having the French language forced on us by an inimical national power aided and abetted by Quebec. We shouldn't have to endure "any second language in this part of Canada in order that any person shall exercise his full rights as a citizen," he says. It is difficult to believe that any man in a position of responsibility in our government would put forth so twisted and unfounded a comment on our bilingual nationhood.

When such remarks closely follow his earlier boasts that this province is "not dependent upon the rest of Canada for our well-being," and hints that we could do much better for ourselves by going it alone, one wonders just what this apparently organized Socred assault on Confederation is leading up to.

From Mr. Gaglardi, of course, free-wheeling garrulity is to be expected. Yet it is disturbing to have him join the Centennial Year chorus with cries of Canadian discrimination against British Columbia, and complaints that this province — whose vast riches and prosperity under Social Credit auspices are hailed in other speeches—is being robbed by having to contribute to less fortunate parts of our nation.

Mr. Campbell, also sporting a maple leaf pin, ruggedly declares that "this is not a colonial administration any more; it is a sovereign government in its own right." And both he and Mr. Kiernan are apparently obsessed with the terms "supplicant" and "bended knee" when describing this province's negotiations with Ottawa for federal funds.

* * *

It is alarming that Mr. Bennett has never repudiated the derogatory utterances of his colleagues. He has, in fact, publicly supported Mr. Loffmark's strange attitudes from time to time. What can be back of all this? A whole breastful of maple leaf pins cannot conceal what must be nothing less than a calculated policy of trying to separate the Canadians of British Columbia from the Canadians of the rest of the country, to weaken our national ties and set us apart as an aggrieved and cheated minority.

Mr. Bennett can be devious but he is not stupid. His anti-Canadian campaign—it cannot be described as anything less—is being carried far beyond any mere financial manoeuvre. What, exactly, is he getting us ready for?

Followup and Letdown

A GENERAL SENSE OF DISappointment has been felt in almost every country following the resumption of full-scale warfare in Vietnam. The letdown is a measure of the hopes which had been building during the short ceasefire: the widespread rumors of backstage talks, of peace feelers and imminent concessions had drawn more than the usual attention to the prospect of peace in the dreary war that no one wants but which apparently no one can stop.

President Johnson's contention that the North Vietnamese had used the ceasefire to re-supply troops in the field is given as the immediate reason for resumption of bombing in the north. How valid the assertion is cannot be known, but it appears to have persuaded British Prime Minister Wilson that Hanoi was not sincere in seeking a permanent truce.

The sad truth is that neither side is yet ready to come to a peace table. Both sides still seem to believe they can win the war — the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong through time and attrition of their opponent's will to win, and the Americans through superiority of arms. Neither of these opinions is widely shared by outside observers, and a long and indecisive war is a strong possibility.

Despite this pessimistic outlook, Canada and other countries which desire an end to the fighting must continue their efforts to intercede. And to do this they must maintain open lines of communication with both sides, using all the persuasive power at their command to convince them that continuation of the war is a folly which neither can afford.

Whose Logs?

BRITISH COLUMBIA'S DEPUTY forest minister, Mr. F. S. McKinnon, has pointed to legal as well as economic obstacles to a log salvage operation which would collect timber that has broken away from booms and market it to mills for pulp or other purposes.

He points out that marked logs still belong to their owners even when lost from booms and cannot be taken for anyone else's use under the Criminal Code.

This being the case, then who is responsible for damage done by strayed logs when they become hazards to navigation for small boats, or when, storm-driven, they batter shore installations? Or, for that matter, who should repay the city of Victoria for the money it spends clearing beaches when they become the resting place of too many marked logs?

FROM WASHINGTON

By JOSEPH ALSOP

Virtue in 'Thin' Anti-Missile Deployment

VERY few people have grasped, as yet, how much the shape of the future is going to depend on the talks about anti-missile-missiles that Ambassador J. Llewellyn Thompson is now carrying on in Moscow. Thus far the Soviet response to Thompson has been cool but non-committal. Ambassador Thompson has been telling the Soviet leaders, "We won't deploy if you won't deploy. Let's both save ourselves a great many billions of dollars." But the Soviets, as is well known, have already begun deploying their anti-missile-missiles on a considerable scale.

Alsop

Difficult Task

Persuading them to reverse their course is clearly going to be very difficult indeed, and not only because a flat self-reversal is being asked for. The truth is that the Soviet military leaders have far more muscle in Soviet society than our joint chiefs of staff have ever had in our society, even pre-McNamara.

When the silence of terror ended with the death of Stalin, all groups in Russia were free to throw their weight about. The military thereupon played the leading role in the rise of Khrushchev. The wily Khrushchev at length organized a night of the long knives, to get rid of his over-mighty chief sponsor, Marshal Zhukov. But even thereafter, Khrushchev was never really successful in any of his series of attempts to cut back Soviet defence expenditures. And it is virtually certain that the military also played an important role in the night of the long knives that got rid of Khrushchev.

Hence any course that really outrages the marshals of the Soviet defence ministerium is pretty unlikely to be adopted by the Soviet government. And if you figure out what General Curtis E. Lemay would be saying if he were in the marshals' shoes, you have an almost certainly accurate version of what the Soviet marshals are now saying about Thompson's proposals.

Near Miracle

It will be a near-miracle, therefore, if the Soviets reverse their course completely. If they do not do so, the United States will then have to choose between what the Pentagon calls the "thick" and the "thin" deployments of American anti-missile-missiles (which are more advanced than the Soviet models).

The "thin" deployment will give the United States an anti-missile defence against anyone but the Soviets, conspicuously including China, and it will afford protection to our own missile striking power, even against the Soviets. Its cost will be between $5 billion and $9 billion, depending on the degree of thinness.

The "thick" deployment will cover all populated centres and will cost between $30 billion and $50 billion. It is calculated to save 70 million U.S. lives in the event of all-out Soviet attack — provided the Soviets do nothing to overcome it. This looks superficially tempting.

Yet Secretay of Defence Robert McNamara has already plumped for the "thin" deployment. He points out that it is much cheaper to increase offensive power, which he intends to do, than to build defensive power. He further says that if we deploy a "thick" defence, the Soviets will inevitable overcome it by much increasing their numbers of offensive missiles, whereupon we shall be minus many wasted billions, but otherwise back at position one.

McNamara's opponents say, correctly, that the most dangerous thing to do in an arms race is to fall far behind; and they add that we can easily beat the Soviets in an investments race. The trouble is that being forced into this kind of an arms and investments race will almost certainly militarize Soviet society in the end. And that, certainly, is not a pretty prospect, or a result likely to serve American interests.

Thus one wonders whether Ambassador Thompson would not be better employed preaching the mutual advantages, to the Soviets and Americans, of "thin" deployments by both countries. The point about "thin" Soviet and American deployments of anti-missile-missiles is that they will give the two giant powers complete protection, not against one another, to be sure, but against any kind of nuclear power that can be imaginably developed in other countries like France and China.

Empty Gesture

Unless he chooses to threaten his new friends in Germany, General de Gaulle's "force de frappe" will thus be automatically reduced to an immensely costly gesture of empty pomp, like Louis XIV's gold-woven bed curtains. Chinese nuclear power will cease to be a threat either to the U.S. or the U.S.S.R. The British will actually be likely to junk their burdensome nuclear deterrent, as being both expensive and useless.

Although it will certainly displease General de Gaulle in an extreme degree, there is nothing in this prospect that ought to displease practical-minded Americans and Russians. In fact if the U.S. and U.S.S.R. can just content themselves with "thin" anti-missile deployments, a great deal will thereby be gained.

KOSYGIN IN LONDON

By TIM TRAYNOR

What's the Motive Behind the Thaw?

HE is short, grey, rather glumfaced. His voice is soft, sometimes even a bit sad. But it is his eyes that you notice most. They are dark blue, penetrating, constantly on the move. Alexei Nikolayevich Kosygin, co-leader of the Soviet Union, successor to Stalin and Khrushchev was on display last Thursday to correspondents attending a luncheon and press conference here. Courtesy of Early Bird satellite, he was also on the television screens of millions of North American homes.

Traynor

In most respects, he matched his advance billing. He is well known as the planner — dour, taciturn, the unemotional antithesis of the shoe-banging Khrushchev. But few who had not seen him before could have been quite prepared for the cool keeness of his gaze — and of his tongue. "I won't answer that directly, but . . .," or a curt rebuke, "I don't see any reason why the question should be put in those terms."

His replies to questions were deftly frank. Although most were written and submitted in advance, some were provocative enough and might well have touched off an ideological tirade by a less controlled personage. Not so with the latest Mr. K. At most there would be evasive tactics, for the rest it was an adroit demonstration of blunting verbal shafts, calmly laying down the law, and attacking without bluster. He could not intervene in the case of Gerald Brooke, the British lecturer jailed by the Russians for "subversive activity," because that would mean interfering with the judiciary. The Germans would have to sign a nuclear non-proliferation treaty whether they liked it or not because the Soviet Union was determined that they should never gain access to nuclear weapons. The Americans must stop killing Vietnamese and stop their "aggression" against North Vietnam.

It was an impressive performance, which set the stage well for his climactic speech later the same afternoon to the two houses of Parliament. There, he tied together the themes he has been developing throughout his week-long visit into a comprehensive pattern. Britain and the Soviet Union should conclude a friendship treaty to contribute to "the development of international co-operation, to an international detente and to stronger peace and security for the nations." The main threat at present to the "peace and security of the nations" were the Vietnam war and German "revanchism."

He laid strong stress on the desirability of a treaty banning the dissemination of nuclear weapons and sounded hopeful that one would be signed. This would be an important step toward nuclear disarmament and would have a most direct bearing on the security of Europe.

Russian Conditions

Once it was agreed there would be no spread of nuclear weapons within Europe, and particularly to Germany, two of the major Soviet conditions for troop withdrawals would be fulfilled. The third was the guarantee of existing boundaries within Europe.

Under these conditions, there could be a withdrawal of both NATO and Warsaw Pact forces. The Americans should withdraw all the way across the Atlantic "without any intermediate stops." This would enable the Warsaw Pact to take "the appropriate measures." European security had been the focal point of his talks with Prime Minister Harold Wilson, he said, but there had been agreement on the right means to reach the ends which both countries desired equally. If Mr. Wilson had more proposals than he had outlined, the Soviet Union would "consider them with great attention."

The reaction of the 800 ministers, MPs and peers who made up his audience was warm at the outset of his speech, which lasted an hour including translation. But as he moved to the tougher aspects of the Soviet policy, the atmosphere was more restrained.

There was little indication that the proposals for a friendship treaty were widely greeted with enthusiasm. On the Conservative side, there was scepticism that it would contribute to the easing of tensions. Predictably, fears were expressed that the Soviet aim was to undermine NATO.

Even if it fails to produce any drastic change in international relations, however, the speech has had at least one sure result. Combined with the rest of the Kosygin visit, it has illuminated the depth of the Soviet leader's desire to stimulate the currents undermining the post-war shape of Europe. Movement away from the patterns of the cold war — in trade, defence, even culture — was a continuing theme throughout his visit. It only remains to be determined what the motive is behind it all.

Shipments of copper will immediately commence from the copper mines of the Alaska Industrial Company at Sulzer, Prince of Wales Island, Alaska, to the Tyee smelter at Ladysmith. The Norwegian steamer Haldis left Vancouver yesterday for Sulzer to bring south the first consignment of ore. The steamer will bring south between 2,600 and 2,800 tons of ore this trip, and for the next few months the Alaska Industrial Company will ship to the Ladysmith smelter about 1,000 tons monthly.

Sublime Nonsense

We hope that at least a few people will perceive the sublime nonsense of the ideological claim that universities anywhere, are places where students may expand their intellects in the directions of their desires, when they look at the latest firings and resignations at Uvic.

These conservative institutions won't even tolerate liberal thought or methods. In this pitiful situation there is no problem involving a questioning of the basic tenets of extant society. The flare-up arises principally over explorations in running a section of capitalism better. — J. G. Jenkins, 959 Darwin Ave.

Disturbed by Uvic

The Times of February 8 carried an article, "Reward Uvic Silence With Bonus" in which Social Credit backbencher, Hunter Vogel, stated that "Uvic deserves a little extra from the budget because they have been very quiet and well behaved." Times of Feb. 10 describes the firing of certain admittedly outstanding teachers, presumably because of certain unpopular activities or statements.

The two stories are very disturbing to me. They are distinctly related, in my opinion, and reflect a basic weakness in Uvic's administration, namely, perpetual infancy. I strongly suspect that this infancy is perpetuated not only by certain old-line faculty members, but even more so by a superconservative board of governors, itself a mirror of a conservative Victoria.

A university is a community in ferment. Any such institution that fires good teachers (a rare species these days) for any reason other than gross misconduct (not including criticism of the administration) is treading a dangerous path to extinction. It is obvious that UBC and SFU are steadily gaining national and international respect as time goes on. But I truly believe that unless Uvic quickly gets with the times and makes a concerted effort to attract and retain good teachers (controversial ones preferably), her chances of survival will be nil. — Oswald N. Morris, 415 Michigan

No Amnesty

Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste

The Independent member for Trois-Rivieres in the Commons, Mr. J. A. Mongrain, invited the government . . . to consider the possibility of granting an amnesty to certain prisoners during the Royal Visit in July.

Mr. Mongrain explained that his suggestion was aimed particularly at "students who are in prison for certain separatist activities which were inspired by the ardor of youth rather than by criminal instincts."

The solicitor-general, Mr. Larry Pennell, replied . . . he would consider the suggestion. . . .

Mr. Mongrain's idea is praiseworthy. No doubt he wants to sweeten the pill for the separatists to make it easier for them to swallow the Royal Visit. But we are under the impression that an amnesty for terrorists on the occasion of the visit of Elizabeth II to Canada will not produce the expected results, precisely because the gracious sovereign represents for them, on Canadian soil, the symbol of the colonialism they have undertaken to fight to the finish.

Let us express the pious hope that the forthcoming Royal Visit will occur without trouble, because otherwise, the success of the world's fair in Montreal could be seriously compromised.

Alberta's Manning Seeks New Political Reformation

By PETER C. NEWMAN

EDMONTON — "The existing party structure in this country is in an advanced state of disintegration. Our whole political order is in its death throes—and I don't think it's in the interest of Canada that it be salvaged."

The man who subscribes to this shattering assessment of the Canadian political scene is no dishevelled radical, but Canada's most conservative — and most successful — politician: Ernest C. Manning, the one-time Bible-school teacher who has been premier of Alberta for a generation.

Newman

Relaxing in his office in Edmonton's majestic legislative buildings, Ernest Manning is very different from the raucous evangelist image he projects on Sunday mornings over radio's "Back to the Bible" hour. He's the most self-contained politician I've ever interviewed.

In fact, Manning is so disarming in person that one quickly forgets he got into politics as an ardent disciple of the monetary theories of Social Credit and remains the party's most persuasive advocate. (Manning was sworn into a Social Credit cabinet at the age of 26 in 1935, became premier in 1943, and now runs the only genuinely debt-free provincial administration in the country, with no effective opposition in sight.)

PREMIER MANNING
. . . self-contained

For all that, Manning has quietly abandoned any notion of turning Social Credit into a national force. He is now obsessed instead with a theory he holds about the evolution of the Canadian political process.

He believes that this evolution has four distinct stages.

At the beginning, Manning contends, there were genuine philosophical differences between the two major parties so that people could vote according to their own corresponding personal convictions. But when one party became dominant, the other, wanting to get into power, reassessed its position and watered down its principles. This led to the second, what he calls "convergence" stage, when our major parties abandoned their identifying principles and became vehicles for personality cults.

Disintegration

The third phase is the disintegration of the traditional party system. "That's where we're at now," he says. "It's a time of inadequacy, when no party can meet the obvious requirements of the country, and you get the rapid rise of third parties, such as the NDP, of frustrated people who at least want to stand for something."

The premier's hope is that out of the present chaos will come a fourth stage: a time of reformation, when the fragmented party structure polarizes into two parties. One would be pledged to uphold truly conservative principles and the other would support what he calls "the welfare state philosophy."

His dream is that such a realignment would automatically allow the conservative party to dominate, because it would bring under one roof, "all the Tories, many right-wing Liberals, most Social Crediters, and a substantial block of people not now associated with any party," while the opposing group would have only leftist-type Liberals and the NDP."

Manning's own involvement in this hoped-for polarization has been his unofficial backing of the National Public Affairs Research Foundation, a private group dedicated to defining the kind of free enterprise principles this country might follow.

"I have no intention of getting mixed up in federal politics," he told me, "though I'm realistic enough to realize you can't get involved in trying to formulate political principles without getting roped into the political end of things. But I will resist that."

It's Manning's naive-sounding contention that principles and not personalities can become the catalysts for the kind of political duality he wants to achieve. "If you have the individual without the proper programs and philosophy, I don't care if he's the angel Gabriel, he isn't going to be able to straighten out the mess," he says.

More To Offer

The whole thrust of Manning's ultra-conservative philosophy is directed against "the steady growth of government intervention into all aspects of social and economic life." He believes that "the private enterprise system has more to offer the individual than any form of government," and once expressed the hope that parliament would "come to be regarded as the boardroom of the nation."

The Alberta premier's approach to Ottawa is to regard federalism in the classic American manner as a constraint on the growth of government authority through the separation of power. Manning's only specific grievances against the federal government at the moment are its levying of estate taxes (which he intends to do away with by having the province refund federal succession duties) and the existence of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism, which he regards as "a colossal waste of public funds. It's already been repudiated by French and English Canadians alike. Just seven million dollars down the drain."

Too Lenient

He's convinced that the Pearson government has shown too much lenience in dealing with Quebec's separatists: "And every time they do, they antagonize ten times as many people in the rest of Canada."

Despite the fact that it has been in office for 32 years, the Social Credit government is as indomitable as ever. (The only politician who seems to have even an outside chance of challenging Manning's power is Peter Lougheed, an attractive and articulate young Calgary lawyer, who was elected last year to lead the province's Conservative party, which has no seats in the present legislature. The other two parties, the NDP and the Liberals, do hold four seats between them, but they're dispirited and have no outstanding personality around whom they can rally.)

Endless Wealth

The Socreds now have 59 of the legislature's 63 seats. With petroleum royalties providing 42 per cent of Alberta's revenues, Manning runs the only provincial administration in Canada that can afford not to impose a retail sales tax. And there's no end to the bonanza in sight. About two hundred exploration wells are currently being drilled in the hot northwest corner of Alberta's oil country, where at least two billion barrels are expected to be added to the province's known oil reserves.

Manning doesn't appear worried about anything except what he calls "Canada's drift into socialism."

"We've got everything," he says. "In relation to our population, we have the greatest natural resources in the world. We have a land that's untrampled by invasion or war. The only thing wrong with Canada is the mussy way it's being administered."

Happier Mood in Commons; More Work Getting Done

By GERALD WARING

OTTAWA — The Commons has been in a happier mood lately than I've seen it in many months, and whatever the cause, this is good. One of the arguments used to justify the value of the United Nations is that it's better to have nations arguing and even insulting one another in UN debate than shooting at one another.

Waring

In Parliament this point of view can be carried a step further: it's better to have Grits and Tories laughing at and with each other than engaged in bitter, relentless political warfare that frustrates achievement of Parliament's real tasks and lowers public esteem of the institution and those serving therein.

Along with the easing of partisan tensions, the Commons is making good progress in its work.

Maybe it's the effect of the Centennial Spirit. Maybe it's also realization by the two chief protagonists, Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker, that the lengthening of their political shadows suggests a certain futility in perpetuating their mutual animosity. And maybe it's realization by MPs that the folks back home are more than a little fed up with the obstruction, rancor and muck-raking that characterized the Commons between 1964 and 1966.

There's much talk of adoption of new procedures to make Parliament more effective and efficient in its handling of the nation's business. Few question that this kind of reform is needed, and so it will come. But the most urgently needed reform of a year ago appears to have been achieved. It is the abandonment of political bickering and infighting as an end to itself in the daily confrontations between political opponents.

In Parliament party followers take their leads from party leaders. When Mike and Dief snarl at one another, everybody tends to snarl. And when Mike and Dief joke and laugh, which they've been doing a lot lately, everybody tends to joke and laugh.

It's getting hard to remember when the last political jugular was slit, or back knifed.

A lot of the humor that sidesplits Parliament is "in" humor that doesn't make much sense to outsiders who don't know what happened before, and thus don't get the allusions and implications upon which the quip in question is built. I'm sure many visitors are mystified that so many MPs can laugh so heartily over so little.

Like Mike remarking about "strange rumors" in a Toronto paper these days, and Dief coming back to chide Mike for "biting the hand that feeds you." MPs know this was about a report in that paper that Mr. Pearson intends to retire in a year, and they laughed at both sallies.

Some days it's as if the traditional "silly season" of August had come six months early — like Friday, when one Tory MP asked the government how he could find 2,000 hotel rooms in Montreal in June, a Liberal MP protested to Transport Minister Pickersgill that the Centennial Train is permitted to toot its "O Canada" horn only once a day, and another Grit complained that a CBC sports report had the wrong time for a hockey goal, thus causing embarrassment to persons who operate illegal hockey pools.

You Work at It 30 Years And You Start All Over Again

By ART STOTT

Thirty-odd years ago, when I started to build my shack on Copeland property at Cigarmaker's Bay, my mother-in-law, "Toots," offered some sage advice.

Stott

"It's important," she told me, "that you enjoy this kind of work up here. You're just beginning. You'll be at it for the next 30 years or so. Then what you're building now will have fallen into decay and you can start all over again. If you don't like building, then you won't have much fun."

I liked it. And she was right.

When she cautioned me, though, about a third of a century ago, neither of us could foresee what developments would take place. At that time I was interested in putting a roof over the heads of myself and my own and expected to be content with a cabin in what were then the woods.

How was I to know that the years ahead would bring demands like indoor bathrooms and newfangled stuff like that? How was I to know that a gentleman called Mr. Bennett would come along and lead an administration which multiplied my share of the taxes a little more than 12 times the original amount I paid? They are taxes, incidentally, which are not reduced by a home-owner's grant because the place at Shawnigan is not my permanent residence.

When the bills come in, I'm reminded of the musings of an acquaintance who improved a summer home at Sproat Lake. He and his family get up there two to three weeks a summer. The expenses fluctuate for the rest of the year, but are spread over the whole 12 months. When he figured it out, he found he'd save money by getting rid of his summer home and spending the upkeep costs on a de luxe holiday each year in the Bahamas.

The erstwhile cabin in the woods is a luxury now. Even so, I'd say mine was worth it. The kids enjoyed it while they were growing up. So did Pat and I, and there is a continuing satisfaction in working toward improvement and replacement where the processes of time have led to inevitable decay.

But progress has added to the burdens, financial and physical. Not that I object too much to paying toward the education of other people's youngsters who go to school in the area, or to meeting a portion of communal costs, as long as I can afford it. But the indoor bathroom bit is onerous.

When you say it fast, a septic tank sounds easy enough. Two years ago I dug a hole deep enough to contain one of the metal containers sold by mail order houses to catch the drainage from bathroom fixtures and a kitchen sink. It took me about a week's digging. Then I found you can't use metal tanks up there any more. They have to be fiberglas or concrete. So a friendly young gentleman came down from Cobble Hill with a back-hoe and, in a couple of hours, enlarged my excavation enough to put in the precast tank he sold me. My week's digging became an investment in experience.

Then the apparently simple job of laying in bleeding tiles was planned, with a disconcerting discovery. I found I just didn't have enough level land to hold the statutory 150 feet of drainage field. The property slopes toward the lake. Put in three 30-foot parallel rows of tile and the last units point like gun barrels out toward the water.

The problem can be solved. All I have to do is redistribute some real estate, and it so happens that I have great mounds of it under my shack where I hope, eventually, a basement will be located.

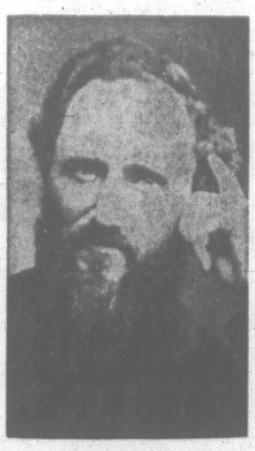

Last weekend I looked at them and explained to the lady supervisor of the project: "The mountain would not come to Mohammed so Mohammed went to the mountain. Mohammed was a sissy. I'm going to move the mountain to where I need it."

By way of encouragement, she said: "Faith moves mountains."

By way of realism I told her she had the quotation a little bit off the original and that faith isn't going to be a substitute for a pick, shovel and wheelbarrow.

I toyed with, and abandoned, the idea of checking the techniques used at Portage Mountain. I doubt the earth-movers could get through my basement door.

And, as "Toots" pointed out long ago, you work on a place for 30 years, and then you start again. It's as simple as that, and just as demanding in time and flagging energy. You have to enjoy it.

William Duncan

Founders Of B.C.

William Duncan rejected his church and his country to serve British Columbia Indians, proving that with fair treatment and leadership they could create a civilization to rival that of the white man.

Duncan was born in 1832 in Yorkshire, England. He was trained as a clerk and a salesman and he was highly successful. But he was very devout and he joined the Church Missionary Society in London and when a call came for religious men to serve the Church of England among the British Columbia Indians, he stepped forward.

He arrived at Victoria in 1857 and soon decided he could better help the Indian away from the influence of the fur trading community. So he travelled north to Fort Simpson to live among the Tsimshians where he soon earned respect, despite early opposition from the tribal medicine men.

He spent almost five years there and established a school In 1862 he resolved to build a Christian community of Indians apart from the trading post at a place called Matlakatla, 20 miles distant.

Enmities built up with white traders who were stopped by native policemen from using liquor in their trade with the Indians. The Church Missionary Society protested Duncan's teaching methods, which lacked ritual.

Duncan averted trouble by moving his whole community into Alaska territory and building a new Metlakatla in 1887 on Annette Island, with even more industries and better homes. It was here that Duncan died in 1918 at the age of 86, his only regret being that he had to move out of British Columbia to create his Promised Land.

Vancouver Is the Home Of 'American Provincial'

By ROBERT FULFORD

(A Toronto Daily Star feature writer, Mr. Fulford recently visited Vancouver. These are excerpts from his report.).

Vancouver, you decide quite soon, is Canada writ small.

All the things Canadians feel towards the outside world — defensiveness, inferiority, a sort of provincial boosterism — Vancouver feels toward the rest of Canada.

Vancouverites, like Canadians as a whole, are aware of their almost unparalleled natural resources, and they are guilty about making so little of them.

People in Vancouver say defensively (as people do across Canada) that they wouldn't leave on any account; but at the same time they seem proud of expatriates.

Vancouver, for instance, still exults in Bernard Braden's success when the rest of Canada has forgotten him. Heading in The Sun: "Braden's Love Affair With 12 Million Britons — How a Vancouver Boy Won Fame and $250,000 Year As Top TV Idol."

Isolation Image

One thing Vancouver has is a self-image. You can sum it up in a word: Isolation.

Vancouver is, in fact, no more isolated than anywhere else — not in this period of quick mass communication — but the people believe they are somehow "cut off" by the Rockies, as if this were still the era of the stage coach.

At times the people here resemble characters in a Somerset Maugham story. This gives Vancouver a temporary feeling, as if everyone planned eventually to abandon the place and give it back to nature.

Even an easterner who is prepared for this fact will be surprised at how much Vancouver seems a northern extension of California. "We dig the San Francisco and Los Angeles scenes," a young man told me.

Dreary Affairs

It is only the newspapers — both of them chain-owned, both of them filled with the same dreary national affairs that obsess you and me — that maintain strong cultural links with the east. Everything else, from local radio to avant-garde painting, is American Provincial.

In all fields, Vancouverites — like Canadians as a whole — yearn for recognition from elsewhere.

"We can look forward," writes Lorne Parton in the Vancouver Province, "to the time when Vancouver theatre is the acknowledged leader in the country." In that sentence the key word, from a Vancouver standpoint, is "acknowledged."

Vancouver people are very self-conscious about their city, though perhaps not so bad in this respect as Torontonians. There is less bumpkinish bragging about imagined "cosmopolitanism" than in Toronto.

Vancouver is an Americanized city, more Americanized even than Toronto. The houses have their California look, Simon Fraser has "semesters," the intellectuals bring in American poets and painters for inspiration, the Bayshore Inn is an American motor hotel of the very best kind.

Shared Loyalty

Unlike their contemporaries elsewhere in Canda, Vancouver young people share their elder's regional loyalties. They dig Vancouver in some basic way.

At a party I met a young filmmaker who used expressions like "blowing your mind" and "freaking out"; who was interested in Tibetan religion; who thought that Berkeley was where it was happening.

He told me that after 18 months in Berkeley he couldn't stand it any more. "I had to get back to my rain forest," he said. I found this rather touching.

THE GALLUP POLL

NDP Noses Out Tories In Voting Strength Test

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

Since the last federal election in November, 1965, the New Democratic Party has gained a significant 10 percentage points in the institute's continuing sampling of voting strength—most of the gain being registered in the past five months.

As a result, the NDP actually shows up in the Gallup Poll's latest returns, from cross-country interviewing, slightly ahead of the Progressive Conservative Party in terms of popular support among those Canadians who have a political preference.

Taken at various points in time since the 1965 election, polls based on careful sampling, show this to have been the trend:

	Liberals	PC	NDP	Scored and Others
Election, Nov., 1965....	40%	33%	18%	9%
January, 1966	44	28	21	7
May	41	30	19	10
July	38	30	20	12
September	37	32	21	10
November	38	26	26	10
TODAY	37	25	28	10

In assessing these results, weight must be given to the fact that, as in the months passed, one in three Canadians does not align his or her self with any political party when asked the standard Institute question:

The question: "If a federal election were held today, which party's candidate do you think you would favor?"

Today's result, with this undecided element added, looks like this, compared with the Institute's result published last November:

	Liberals	P.C.	N.D.P.	Scored and Others	Undecided
Nov., 1966..	25%	18%	17%	7%	33%
TODAY ..	25	17	19	7	32

RELIEVE PRESSURE ON OAKALLA

$4 Million Prison for Coquitlam

Attorney-General Bonner said in the legislature Tuesday the government will build a $4,000,000 prison on the lower mainland, likely in Coquitlam.

He said the new prison will provide facilities for persons undergoing reception and classification and for persons awaiting trial or awaiting appeal.

He said the new remand centre would remove 300 to 400 prisoners from Oakalla Prison in Burnaby.

Mr. Bonner said several sites were being studied but Coquitlam appeared favored because it is handy to the Fraser Valley and the Metropolitan area.

HANEY PROJECT

The attorney-general also announced the province plans to provide a remand centre for young inmates at Haney Correctional Institute.

This will mean no more 14 to 17-year-old prisoners will be sent to Oakalla.

Mr. Bonner said "one of the problems before the public works department" is the replacement of Colquitz Jail in Saanich with a unit at Saltair near Ladysmith.

This is a $3 to $4 million project, he said.

SUPERIOR

Mr. Bonner said that Oakalla "with all its faults is superior to similar institutions in Canada."

The ratio of staff to prisoner in B.C., "people working with people," was higher here than in any other province.

Mr. Bonner said there is "evidence of real progress" in the B.C. probation service.

The decline of institutional population was matched by a rise in the number of people on probation, he said.

Sponsoring the concert will be the Peranon Group of the Women's Society.

'You Subsidize the CPR, Why Not Same for People?'

Dave Barrett (NDP. — Coquitlam) told the legislature Tuesday people, like corporations, should be subsidized.

Addressing the government ranks, he said: "You subsidize the Consolidated Mining and Smelting and the CPR.

"Why not subsidize people who want to help themselves?"

Mr. Barrett, a professional social worker, said payments to both parents in a family might help to train or retrain the head of the family without threatening its security.

SALARY INCREASES

In a speech calling for a major overhaul of welfare policy, including salary raises for welfare workers, he said a man and a woman can live common-law and make money when they are on welfare.

"A single person gets $75 a month; a married couple gets $125. But if they live common-law they get $75 each.

"If you call that keeping the family unit together, your thinking must be wrong somewhere."

He also charged the government "regiments" people on welfare, penalizing them if they show initiative.

MORE FOR DOG-CATCHER

Mr. Barrett said a Vancouver dog-catcher with five years' experience makes more than a university-trained social worker with six years' experience.

Mr. Barrett, while applauding Attorney-General Bonner's announcement Tuesday of a new four million dollar reform institution on the mainland, said they money might be better spent on "a more extensive parole system."

He also suggested offenders be placed in institutions only on weekends, leaving them free to work and support their families the remainder of the week.

Separatists 'Prepare' For Queen

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Bourgault, leader of the separatist Rassemblement pour l'Independance nationale, said last week his party is preparing to receive the Queen on her visit here "after its fashion."

The Queen and Prince Philip will be in Canada from June 29 to July 5 and will spend one day—July 3—visiting the Montreal world's fair.

Earlier this month Mr. Bourgault said that if the Queen comes to Expo "as Queen of England and is recieved in the same way as other foreign dignitaries" there would be no trouble about her visit.

"But, if, on the other hand, she enjoys special treatment, I don't know what will happen, but anything is possible."

The separatist leader, insisted that the words "anything is possible" is no way constituted a menace and denied the RIN was urging violence during the Queen's visit.

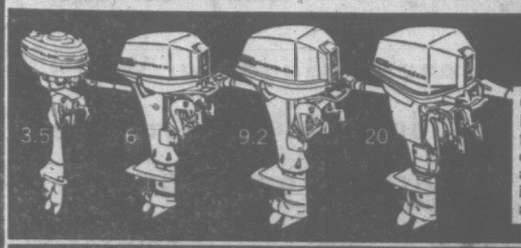

MAPLE LEAF FLAGS FLY ON BIRTHDAY

OTTAWA (CP) — Scores of flags and centennial banners flutter on Parliament Hill today to make the second anniversary of the royal proclamation of the maple leaf flag.

Apart from the special display, no functions are planned to observe the anniversary. There have been some suggestions that Feb. 15 be proclaimed an annual holiday, but government spokesmen said Tuesday night no action has been taken.

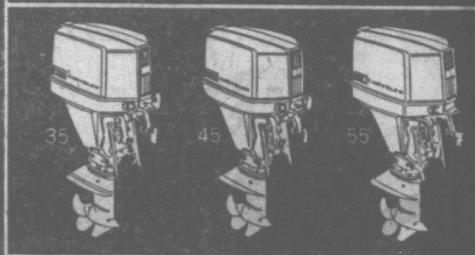

Two years ago today, about 10,000 persons gathered on the Hill to watch a ceremonial lowering of the Red Ensign and the hoisting of the new flag amid cheers and a 21-gun salute.

CAPOZZI

LONG WAIT

'Nodding' Attention To Husband

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) took 35 minutes to deliver his budget speech in the legislature but his wife had to listen for 8½ hours to hear it.

She was almost nodding in the front row of the ladies' gallery by the time her husband wound up his short speech at 1:05 this morning.

Mrs. Capozzi had taken her seat at 2 p.m. Tuesday expecting to hear her husband during the mid-afternoon as the fourth in a schedule of eight speakers.

LAST SPEAKER

But a 4½-hour unscheduled debate on non-confidence motions by the opposition and a hasty re-arrangement of the speaking schedule intervened to leave her husband sixth and last formal speaker when he rose at half an hour past midnight.

The Socred backbencher jibed at opposition members as Snow White and the seven dwarfs—referring directly to Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay) as "the dwarf from Kootenay."

Mr. Capozzi then characterized the NDP as "Mickey Mouse socialists who are always after the cheese—so they can put holes in it" and claimed they took credit for so many government programs that "if there had been a socialist around when the good Lord rested on the seventh day, he would have taken credit for creation."

He made the single exception of Frank Calder (NDP—Atlin), the only Indian MLA in Canada.

OVERCOME POVERTY

Mr. Capozzi said he was so impressed by Mr. Calder's "sincere ad thoughtful" speech last week on Indian needs that he would publicly call on his government colleagues to establish an "operation bootstrap" program to help Indians overcome poverty.

He warned the cabinet that although a backbencher his "voice will not be stilled," and he will press for a Vancouver through-road and completion of Mt. Seymour provincial park.

He urged creation of a lower mainland metro police force and government grants to encourage policemen to take university courses.

SON LOSES EYE

Mr. Capozzi drew a general round of applause when he said the B.C. workmen's compensation board should not require penitentiary guard Frank Newton, whose hands were blown off by a bomb wrapped as a Christmas gift, to prove it was an ex-prisoner who sent the package.

Mr. Capozzi said the board was withholding a pension because the tragedy occurred at Mr. Newton's home during his off-duty hours. His 10-year-old son lost an eye in the explosion.

Minor Fined $35

Garry Busch, 19, of 1046 View, was fined $35 Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor.

Socreds Win Fourth Vote

Marathon Debate Forced On Hospital, School Projects

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

The government was dragged protesting through a see-saw debate of 4½ hours Tuesday over its school, hospital and post-secondary institution construction programs before surviving its fourth confidence vote this session.

Premier Bennett—who accused the opposition of a filibuster—retaliated by insisting that the interrupted schedule of speakers proceed to add another four hours to the day's sittings but he relented at 1:05 this morning and adjourned the house with two speakers left over.

The non-confidence amendment—fourth this session and first attached to a budget speech by the NDP in some six years—deplored the school and hospital construction situation but it was defeated finally 32 to 22 despite Liberal support.

Angry, Humorous Exchanges

There were angry and humorous exchanges during the marathon, including these:

Premier Bennett berated the opposition for failing to give credit to the government for raising $77 million in school financing "more per capita than anywhere in the world in the 12-month period from February 1966 to February 1967 during a free-world financial crisis and, for one day, the bottom dropped out of international money markets.

However, he said, it was Valentine's Day so he would not criticize the opposition any more.

"It's also the anniversary of the Valentine's Day massacre—killed 18," Liberal leader Ray Perrault reminded him later. "You came in with your verbal violin case."

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre), with his wife looking on, shouted over some heckling to describe the opposition as "political eunuchs—they know how it's done but they can't do it themselves."

He was told three times by Speaker William Murray to stick to the subject and finally was warned he would have to discontinue his speech if he persisted on tangents.

Later, he touched off uproarious laughter when he made a blooper while attacking the opposition's non-confidence amendment as "one of the most obvious tricks, the most despicable trick by any government . . . I mean by any opposition."

Alan Macfarlane (L—Oak Bay) said the government's refusal to permit construction of Newton Elementary School earlier means that "all or most elementary schools in the Gordon Head area will be on the shift system come September."

He said the 3,600 private nursing home beds in the province could have been bought by the government to provide $1-a-day chronic care accommodation for all who need it by an expenditure of only $36 million—less than the sum the premier siphoned from his surplus last session to pay off ferry debts.

"I'm tired of coming down here and listening to the surpluses of $115 million which this government hoards and sits on while our children have no facilities to be educated . . . and our chronically ill face this heartless attitude," Mr. Macfarlane snapped.

Robert Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) said all the boastful figures in the premier's budget would not fool the public this year because "the people understand the reality in this province—the children will be on a swing shift system this September."

He claimed the hospital construction financing authority was "just another dumping device" for loading more costs onto municipal taxpayers.

Opposition 'Prisoners of Past'

Education Minister Leslie Peterson said both the school and hospital situations had changed while the opposition prepared their non-confidence amendment last week yet "the plan is so sacred to them they went ahead with the amendment anyway because they are prisoners of the past and cannot adjust to the changing scene."

He said while the opposition had no confidence in the government he had jsut received a wire from the school boards of the province expressing their approval for the school construction formula.

"And this nonsense about a freeze," he said. "Do they call $20 million worth of construction since October a freeze? There has not been a freeze. There has been only a slowdown.

"But all school projects for classrooms in this province are proceeding now and without any delay on our part."

NDP Leader Robert Strachan said Mr. Peterson's statement that all essential school construction would proceed now was exactly the same as his statement last October and because it represents no change, the opposition was justified in proceeding with its non-confidence motion.

He pointed out last year the legislature was told there were 1,083 $1-a-day chronic care beds in the province but this year there are only about 1,000.

"So we've had 12 months of progress—and we've lost 83 chronic beds."

Attorney-General Robert Bonner said if the MLAs were really interested in education they would withdraw the non-confidence motion.

"If you're for education you're not for a general election and you know if this amendment was to pass we wouldn't be here tomorrow, we'd be out in the country on the hustings," he said.

"No one in the public should be in any doubt but that there is some high-level manoeuvring going on by the opposition."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell claimed "there is a leadership convention (by the oppositoin parties) being fought out under disguise.

Dr. Pat McGeer (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) said the government showed "political cynicism" when it hid the situation from the electorate in the last election campaign.

"Up until Sept. 12 there wasn't any difficulty borrowing money. The trouble started right after the election—we got the freeze-up. You didn't face the people with that.

"And when did this world financial crisis ease? Why it eased when the opposition got to this session and began raising the issues on the schools and the hospitals—that's when we finally got some action.

"There's a great big show window in B.C. of power construction but there's a mess in the kitchen where schools and hospital have been delayed.

"Finances for people's needs is the missing lobe in the Social Credit brain."

WHAT'S A THREAT OR TWO, OR THREE!

Add one, two or three more to Cassius Clay's list of title contenders.

Municipal Affairs and Social Welfare Minister Dan Campbell, speaking near the tail end of a four and one-half hour non-confidence debate, said Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) did not properly appreciate Simon Fraser University in his own riding.

Mr. Campbell said Mr. Dowding once called it "a university on paper."

"Shocking!" said Mr. Dowding. "I didn't say it."

"A while ago he said he would punch me in the nose in the hall," said Mr. Campbell.

"I wouldn't have punched him in the hall," said Mr. Dowding, "but in the nose."

"I wish you would keep your promises," said Dave Barrett (NDP — Coquitlam) to Dowding.

"That's threatening," said Premier Bennett.

"That's two threats," said Mr. Campbell.

Fulton to Campaign On Economic Policy

VANCOUVER (CP) — Davie Fulton, MP for Kamloops, said Tuesday night he will begin his campaign for leadership of the Conservative Party in about 10 days.

He told a press conference his campaign to replace John Diefenbaker as leader will be built around economic development of Canada.

"There must be an alternative to the dangerous isolationism of Walter Gordon and the sloppy internationalism of Robert Winters which leads to inevitable absorption by the United States," Mr. Fulton said.

"The first priority facing Canadians is to contribute to their own economy, to build their country, not social welfare, which is the top priority of the present government."

FRANCE PUTS 'BRAKES' ON N-BOMBS

PARIS (AP) — France will have a slow-falling nuclear bomb later this year which can be used for low-level attacks without endangering the plane, officials told reporters Tuesday during a tour of the underground control centre for France's growing nuclear force.

"The dropping of nuclear bombs from the supersonic Mirage IV plane will be possible thanks to braking parachutes they will be equipped with," said Col. Roger Rhemter, commander of the underground installation in the village of Taverny, 16 miles northwest of Paris.

He said they would be available to the air force's 50 or more Mirage IVs "beginning in the second half of this year."

Home Building Cutback to End?

By AB KENT
Business Editor

A leading forest industrialist says an easing in mortgage rates may herald a return to prosperity in the housing construction business.

George H. Weyerhaeuser, president of the Weyerhaeuser Company, Tacoma, said in a recent report his company expects "significant improvement in housing market conditions in 1967."

KENT

Conditions in the housing industry could hardly get worse, especially in the U.S., where building came to a virtual standstill by late last year.

As a result, there was dramatic decline in the demand for construction materials and widespread production cutbacks in the northwestern U.S. and B.C.

The cutbacks, Mr. Weyerhaeuser said, resulted in firming of building material prices in some commodities.

Meanwhile, with a loosening of the money market, lumber shipments have returned to a more or less normal level in this part of the province.

This would indicate at least that distributors are selling some lumber or buying for inventory anticipating a resumption of the bull market.

By comparison with the U.S., the Canadian housing construction industry takes very little of the lumber output from B.C.

Yet, there is steady demand for new housing in many parts of Canada, particularly in the lower-rental category. And the amount of mortgage money provided by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. for new starts this spring will do little to fill in the backlog of demand.

The rest is up to private lending agencies offering mortgage money at the most attractive rates they can manage.

A program of exploration including diamond drilling is expected to start early next month on Coast Silver Mines Ltd. copper claims in the Cariboo under direction of Gibraltar Mines Ltd.

Gibraltar holds an option to earn 50 per cent interest in the 13-claim Jan and Summit groups of claims covering what is presumed to be the western extension of the main ore zone on Gibraltar's own property.

Cominco and Mitsubishi Metal Mines Ltd. are partners in a plan to develop a portion of the Cominco interest in Gibraltar. Cominco has spent $130,000 on exploration to this point and thus earned 50,000 Gibraltar shares under option.

A further option for an equivalent number of shares was extended beyond Jan. 15 and Cominco has indicated it will be picked up.

Grid drilling to test the eastern limit of the ore zone will start in March.

The Toronto-based firm interested in Vancouver Island and other Pacific coastal areas for possible market proving grounds in air cushion vehicle development has joined forces with British Hovercraft Corporation.

Bell Aerosystems Canada, whose president James G. Mills was a recent visitor to Victoria, announced with Stuart J. Miller, Hovercraft's North American manager, that a joint sales organization has been formed.

There will be a co-ordinated market development program designed to introduce air cushion vehicles to commercial and government uses in Canada, especially remote areas such as the B.C. coastline, the tundra, river valleys and the frozen north.

Tuktoyaktuk, N.W.T., already has been scene of trials conducted in co-operation with the transport department.

Quatsino Copper-Gold Mines Ltd. and New Privateer Mine Ltd., whose properties adjoin in the Pine Point area, were to start a joint diamond drilling program this week.

The equipment and full camp facilities are on site awaiting the order to go from Edmonton geologist G. H. Argy.

Three deep test holes totalling around 2,900 feet will be drilled at a cost of $50,000. They will try to delineate an ore body in an anomaly 6,800 feet long.

GOLD MINING OPERATION WILL CLOSE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Officials of Cariboo Gold Quartz Mining Co. Ltd. announced Tuesday the company will close its 34-year-old gold mining operations at Wells, near Barkerville in the Cariboo.

J. Royden Morris, Cariboo president, said the company will end its operations April 15, but the property will be retained. He said mining operations will resume if there is a substantial increase in the price of gold.

Mr. Morris said the company made a cash profit of $134,000 during 1966, but after allowance for write-offs, the unaudited net profit was $87,663.

Gold, Dollar Drain in U.S. Continues

WASHINGTON (CP) — The U.S. drain of gold and dollars last year totalled $1,424,000,000 or only $87,000,000 more than in 1965, Treasury Secretary Henry Fowler said Tuesday.

Vietnamese war costs contributed $950,000,000 — up $685,000,000. The other main factor was a $1,100,00,000 slip in the U.S. trade surplus, including the cutting in half of the surplus normally run up with Canada in motor vehicles and parts.

Earnings from foreign subsidiaries in Canada and elsewhere contributed more than $4,000,000,000 on the credit side while the outflow of U.S. direct investment abroad was "far less than that."

"We are continuing to build a base from which future foreign dividends will flow," Fowler said at a news conference.

Fowler said U.S. investment abroad increasingly is being achieved from foreign money markets.

SEES FUTURE BALANCE

Fowler called the 1966 record a "respectable performance permitting continued expectation that the U.S. will be able to bring its foreign exchange transactions into sustainable equilibrium in more normal circumstances."

Equilibrium has been defined as $250,000,000 above or below the line and Fowler in the past virtually has written off equilibrium until the Vietnam war ends.

The auto trade with Canada, under the duty-free provisions for North American manufacturers set up in 1965, was a prominent part of the statistical figure.

Exports of cars and parts rose by nearly $400,000,000 to $1,200,000,000 in U.S. sales to Canada. But Canada at the same time sold about $700,000,000 more in cars and parts to the U.S. or a total of $900,000,000, trimming the trade deficit with the U.S. on this account to about $300,000,000.

New Game Starting Says Udall

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Canadian government is under pressure from the Western Canadian petroleum industry to expand crude oil sales in the U.S.

But, in a move showing why such expansion is easier said than done, Interior Secretary Udall has warned the U.S. domestic oil industry that a "new game is starting" in the energy field.

Petroleum in the future "will be less concerned with capturing markets than, with defending those they already have," he told the National Petroleum Council here recently.

Udall, the cabinet secretary responsible for the U.S. oil import program governing Canadian and other foreign supplies, pointed at the unprecedented surge last year in use of nuclear energy.

He cited coal's comeback as an energy source and the implications for the energy industry of air pollution curbs, a key feature of the president's program for Congress. This program may bring more competitive conditions for oil, natural gas or coal, Udall said.

Some energy sources suggest Udall was speaking generally and that it would be unwise to read too much into his speech when considering Canadian efforts to increase oil and gas sales in the U.S.

Nevertheless, his words have a bearing on how much more the expanding Western Canada petroleum industry can reasonably expect to flow across the boundary.

Energy Minister Pepin, saying Canadian crude oil exports ran at a record 379,000,000 barrels daily last year, an increase of 18 per cent, has sounded more optimistic than did a special report prepared for some Calgary interests by W. E. Levy Inc., of New York.

Canadian efforts to broaden Canada's grip on the U.S. market have been continuous since 1961, despite strong residual objections among independent petroleum producers in the United States.

BRENDA MINES WATER BID OPPOSED

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Brenda Mines Ltd. Tuesday made application to divert more than 3,500 gallons of water per minute from Pennask Lake to a proposed $40,000,000 copper and molybdenum operation southeast of Kamloops.

The application was opposed by Dave Rogers of Kamloops, representing 360 Indians living on the Upper Nicola Reserve, who argued that there is scarcely enough water now to meet demands.

CPA Orders Six Boeing Jetliners

VANCOUVER (UPI) — Canadian Pacific Airlines announced Tuesday it has placed an order for six Boeing 737-200 short to medium haul jets worth $30 million.

President J. G. Gilmer said the six twin-jet airliners will be used on the carrier's B.C. and Yukon routes.

In addition to the six jets — which cost $5 million each including spare parts — CPA has options to purchase additional 737s.

The first four of the new jets will be delivered from Boeings Seattle plant at the rate of one per month from September through December, 1968. The last two are expected in March and April 1969.

Gilmer said that as the 737s are received, CPA will phase out the fleet of four-engined Douglas DC-6B propeller-driven aircraft now serving the B.C.-Yukon area. CPA operates a 4,438-mile route pattern which radiates out from Vancouver to serve 20 cities and towns.

The 580-mile-per-hour 737s will substantially cut ramp-to-ramp flying time as compared with the DC-6Bs, Gilmer said.

Columbia Cellulose Earnings Decline

VANCOUVER (CP)—Officials of Columbia Cellulose Ltd. have blamed a work stoppage and construction work at its Skeena kraft mill near north coastal Prince Rupert for a "substantial shortfall of earnings" during 1966.

The company said in a statement that net profit decreased from $3,341,662 in 1965 to $1,164,332 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1966. Income totalled $65,530,065 in 1965 but fell off to $64,396,661 last year.

Congestion Blamed for Surcharges

A penalty surcharge on inbound cargoes landed at Vancouver Tuesday was described as a "congestion charge" evolving from heavy freight volumes and a labor problem.

At the same time, a shipper's spokesman said rate setters for cargoes loaded at B.C. ports will consider a similar penalty.

The surcharges affecting incoming cargoes are due to be imposed March 1, said W. C. (Lee) Galloway, chairman of the Pacific Coast committee of Trans-Pacific Steamship Lines in San Francisco.

They were set by two Far Eastern rate-setting bodies:

Trans-Pacific Freight Conference of Japan, at Tokyo, and Trans-Pacific Freight Conference of Hong Kong and Taiwan.

Mr. Galloway is an unofficial representative of the two Far Eastern conferences and chairman of Pacific Westbound Conference, which sets rates for shipping from ports on the Canadian and American coasts.

MAY BE BOOSTED

The March 1 charges are 15 per cent on regular tariffs and will apply only to Vancouver unloadings, Mr. Galloway said.

"I don't know at the present time of any proposal to apply the surcharge elsewhere in B.C.," he said.

"It is not likely to affect other ports unless there is an abnormal volume to be handled."

Shipping men are of the feeling that Vancouver's ability to handle unusually high freight volumes is not being enlarged satisfactorily.

Even though a huge backload of freight as a result of a shipping tieup last fall has now been disposed of, all available resources are being employed to perform routine cargo handling.

"Certain problems are apparently continuing and the companies are unable to work ships as they normally would," Mr. Galloway said.

SACK GANGS

In Vancouver, E. M. Strang, president of B.C. Maritime Employers' Association, said there are not enough longshore gangs to work ships on a day and night basis.

He said 24 ships were being handled today by 90 gangs of longshoremen. On Monday there were 98 gangs out, "by far the most ever turned out in Vancouver," he said.

Mr. Strang complained that the longshoremen's union had not complied with an agreement to have gangs at full strength of eight men.

"This is a strong warning that we should do something about our situation in Vancouver," Mr. Strang said of the surcharges.

It provides an incentive to improving the labor situation and shortening the time ships must spend in port, he felt.

He further felt that it may not be necessary to impose the surcharges March 1 because the situation may have eased by then.

Amalgamation Plans

HALIFAX (CP)—A giant of the Canadian seafood industry, Ocean Fisheries Ltd., has announced it plans to simplify its corporate structure by amalgamating with two of its senior subsidiaries—National Sea Products Ltd. and Lunenburg Sea Products Ltd.

Shareholders of Ocean Fisheries have been sent notices calling a special general meeting of the company Feb. 23 to approve the amalgamation.

SUN LIFE OF CANADA

Again in 1966, Sun Life's Annual Report reflects continuing growth, progress and financial strength.

People who buy insurance from Sun Life expect and get value for their money. The premium you pay for a participating life insurance policy is not your actual cost—dividends reduce your outlay or increase your savings and protection. In 1967 new dividend scales will result in an increase in dividends to individual participating policyholders and the total to be paid in 1967 is estimated at $67,279,000. This was made possible because of excellent interest returns on investments, controlled expenses, favorable mortality, and general operating efficiency.

In 1966 a new Company record was set with sales of more than $1,000,000,000 in ordinary life insurance while in sales of group life insurance the Company maintained a leading place in the industry. Today more than three million men, women and children are enjoying Sun Life protection.

Meeting growing, changing needs keeps Sun Life growing and changing, too. Research and development bring forth new and better ways to give policyholders more value for their life and health insurance premium dollars. Outstanding value in Sun Life policies and outstanding service by trained Sun Life representatives have built the confidence and response that has made Sun Life grow since 1871 into the largest Canadian life insurance company. Bigotry Wins the Day In New Jersey Election

WAYNE, N.J (AP) — Two Jewish candidates for the Wayne Township board of education have been defeated after an election campaign in which their religion was an issue.

The two, Jack Mandell, incumbent, and Robert Kraus, ran fourth and fifth Tuesday night in a field of five seeking three seats on the nine - man board.

Elected were two Protestants and a Roman Catholic. Miller is Protestant.

Miller, in response to a request for his views, made a statement to the local daily newspaper, Wayne Today, Feb. 7, which said:

TAKE AWAY CHRISTMAS?

"Most Jewish people are liberals, especially when it comes to spending for education. If Kraus and Mandell are elected for three years, with Lafer—Fred Lafer who also is Jewish—on for two more years, that's a 3-6 vote. It would only take two more votes for a majority and Wayne could be in real financial trouble.

"Two more votes and we lose what is left of Christ in our Christmas celebrations in our schools. Think about it."

Miller was censured by his school board colleagues and asked to resign, but refused,

He was denounced by local, state and federal officials. Mandell called him an anti-Semite and a bigot.

FAMILIES THREATENED

Anonymous telephone threats were made against the families of Mandell and of other Jewish figures in the community.

The local newspaper reported a flood of letters to the editor which it described as anti-Jewish.

The bulk of the township's 20,000 registered voters turned out Tuesday in this commuter town about 20 miles from New York City.

The school budget expansion was defeated by a margin of more than three to one.

CHILD KILLED, DRIVER HUNTED

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police were searching today for the driver of a car that struck and killed six-year-old Michelle Blankenstein Tuesday as she crossed a street in a residential area. Police said the car struck her in a marked crosswalk near a school, then left the scene at a high rate of speed.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 3,500 American scientists asked President Johnson Tuesday to halt use of riot gas and anti-crop chemicals in Vietnam on the grounds it sets a dangerous precedent in warfare which would lead to world disaster.

SILVER FOR LEE . . . . . . AT WINTER GAMES

City Athletes Star

Victorians are playing an anonymous but vital role in the success of B.C.'s badminton teams in the first Canadian Winter Games at Quebec City.

Judy Humber and Alison Daysmith are members of the B.C. team which with three other provincial squads has gone through 30 matches in men's and women's singles, doubles and mixed play without dropping a match.

B.C. kept its record intact Tuesday by trouncing Manitoba and Nova Scotia in fifth and sixth-round play. In team events, provinces rather than individuals, gain points and recognition.

In other events, British Columbians picked up a silver and two bronze medals.

Jim Lee of Victoria, gold medallist at last year's British Empire Games, was second in the hand-gun shooting competition. He had 1,712 points, only two less than the winner, Keith Elder of Manitoba.

B.C. came third in team shooting behind Manitoba and Ontario.

In gymnastics, Victoria's Rick Johnson won a bronze medal in the vaulting horse and his B.C. teammate Ron Hunter gained a bronze in the rings.

B.C. is faring poorly in curling and hockey. B.C. curlers have a one-three won-lost mark. In hockey Tuesday Saskatchewan pulled off a major upset, whipping B.C. 7-0.

Bostonians Lift One For Good Old Murph

Ah! That Murphy!

Now can't you just see all those Irish Boston hockey fans beamin' over their beer today about him?

About that left winger Ron Murphy?

Scoring two goals and assisting on another in a Boston Bruins' 6-3 win over Detroit Red Wings Tuesday night, Murphy was the greatest thing for the Irish since Clancy lowered the boom.

Last year, Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins negotiated a multiple player trade that sent Murphy to the Bruins.

Murphy went along but played only two games with the Bruins and then decided to quit.

However, before the start of the current National Hockey League season, Murphy and Boston general manager Hap Emms got together and the veteran decided to rejoin the club.

Murphy, a 33-year-old native of Hamilton, Ont., paced the last - place Bruins to a 6-3 victory over Detroit Red Wings in the only scheduled NHL game.

THEY HELP

Rookie Skip Krake, Bill Goldsworthy, Tom Williams and Ron Schock scored the other Boston goals. Bruce MacGregor had two goals for Detroit and Norm Ullman got the other.

Murphy's two goals increased his season total to 10. He needs 14 more regular-season goals to reach the 200-good plateau.

The Rangers, who will meet the Maple Leafs in Toronto tonight in the only scheduled NHL contest, could be missing as many as four players.

One player who won't see any action is Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, who was given a three-game suspension Tuesday night by league president Clarence Campbell.

MUST PAY FINES

Geoffrion will also pay fines amounting to $75 for receiving a misconduct penalty and a game misconduct.

Goalie Cesare Maniago, who replaced Giacomin against Montreal Sunday, may get the call to start in nets. Giacomin didn't play Sunday because his hand, injured 10 days ago, was causing him pain.

WOE IS BAUN

Toronto defenceman Bob Baun will miss tonight's game because of an injury to his left shoulder. The injury was self-inflicted when he fell and crashed into the boards against the Bruins Sunday.

Since the start of training camp last fall, Baun has suffered a broken nose, broken right hand, broken big toe on his left foot, a bruised right shoulder and pulled muscles in his left elbow.

Duane Rupp of Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League will replace Baun. Rupp got the call over Kent Douglas, who bruised a leg during the weekend with Tulsa of the Central Professional Hockey League. Douglas was sent to Tulsa two weeks ago to play himself back into shape.

GULLS BOPPED

Canucks Match Records

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Canucks cracked in four power-play goals in the first period to coast to an easy 7-3 Western Hockey League victory over last-place San Diego Gulls before only 2,320 fans Tuesday night.

The second-place Canucks tied a league record for the number of power-play goals in a game as they added another in the third period to bring their game total to five.

Larry Popein and defenceman Larry Cahan each banged in two goals while Gord Vejprava, Jean Picard and Barry Watson added singles as the Canucks moved five points ahead of third-place Seattle.

Len Ronson, John MacMillan and Warren Hynes replied for San Diego. Vejprava added an assist to move to within one point of Portland's Art Jones in their battle for the league scoring championship. Jones has 66 points, Vejprava 65.

Canucks also tied a league record for the least number of saves in a game as Don Simmons made only 10 to equal a record set by Bev Bentley while playing for Seattle in 1960-61.

Bob Champoux in the San Diego net was bombed with 27 shots, 13 of them when the Canucks exploded in the first frame.

There were a total of 10 penalties called. Seven goals in all were scored while the clubs were shorthanded.

TOTAL GAIN WAS A NET LOSS

The net that was lies limp on the boards in Boston Gardens after Gordie Howe, of Detroit, No. 9, and Bill Goldsworthy, of Boston, No. 26, collided in the Detroit crease on a scoring attempt by Goldsworthy Tuesday night. Roger Crozier, on ice, made the stop. Referee Art Skov whistled the action dead. Led by Ron Murphy's two goals, the Bruins humbled the Red Wings 6-3. Rookie Goldsworthy had a goal and two assists. AT WINTER GAMES

Gold Shared By Youngsters

QUEBEC (CP)—Two little girls from Scarborough, Ont., stood on a podium built for one Tuesday night and received duplicate gold medals at the first Canadian Winter Games.

Judges couldn't decide between Terese McDonald and Jennifer Diachun as they swung through their routine on the uneven bars at the close of hymnastics competition.

A tie was declared and the two girls — both 13 years old and neither weighing more than 80 pounds — mounted the podium together to receive identical gold medals from Gerry Beaudry, assistant director of the games.

The third-place bronze went to Barbara Thompson of Ontario. There was no silver.

For Terese it was a fifth gold medal, making her the highest scorer in the games, so far. She also has a second-place silver. Jennifer has a total of two golds and three silvers.

Only Doreen McCannel of Winnipeg, 19-year-old speed skating champion with four golds, is close to Terese in first places.

Ontario Team Leads Medal Hunt

Medals came in bunches Tuesday as competitors ended in gymnastics, table tennis and pistol shooting.

On the basis of medals won — with three points for a gold, two for a silver and one for a bronze —the provinces line up this way after three days of competition:

Ontario 56 points, Quebec 41, Alberta 34, Manitoba 28 and British Columbia and Saskatchewan seven each.

However, on the basis of official standing which gives points for all entrants in each event, they lined up this way:

Quebec 35, Ontario 33, B.C. 26, Alberta and Manitoba 25, Saskatchewan 23, Nova Scotia 11, Newfoundland 9, New Brunswick 8, Northwest Territories 4, Prince Edward Island 3.

IN BASKETBALL, both B.C. teams survived preliminary play and moved into the championship rounds. B.C.'s men's team, represented by Simon Fraser University, laced Yukon 90-41 while the girls defeated Yukon 43-20.

IN SHOOTING, Manitoba won the team gold medal, Ontario the silver and British Columbia the bronze as hand-gun shooting competition ended. Manitoba had an aggregate score of 6,699 of a possible 7,200, Ontario had 6,667 and B.C. 6,651.

Best individual score was by Keith Elder of Wawanesa, Man., with a total of 1,714 of a possible 1,800. Jim Lee of Victoria, gold medallist at last year's British Empire Games, was second with 1,712 and Art Lord, Ontario champion, was third highest with 1,710.

B.C. Undefeated in Badminton

IN BADMINTON, it was the same old story. The teams from British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec retained their unbeaten records in Tuesday play. The four squads now have gone a total of 30 matches in men's and women's singles, doubles and mixed play without dropping a match.

British Columbia kept its record intact by trouncing Manitoba and Nova Scotia in fifth and sixth-round play.

IN GYMNASTICS, Ontario athletes picked up seven more gold medals, five silvers and three bronze; Quebec added three gold, three silver and five bronze; Saskatchewan got one gold, Manitoba one silver and British Columbia two bronze.

IN CURLING, after five rounds, four provinces — New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island — show an equal 3-1 record. British Columbia is 1-3.

IN HOCKEY, Quebec picked up first place in section A with two wins and no losses after Tuesday's play.

In section B, Ontario leads with two wins in as many games after defeating New Brunswick 9-2 Tuesday.

Armstrong Selected President of Alcos

Also elected at the club's annual meeting were J. Moss, vice-president; A. Hickford, secretary-treasurer; S. Jackson, league representative; L. Heppenstall, captain, and P. Brett, vice-captain.

'We Need It' Group Says Of Sandown

"We need it."

This statement today summarized the feelings of city tourist officials, horsemen, breeders and equipment men to the annual 18-day horse racing meet at Sandown Park.

They were commenting on a statement by Jack Diamond, co-owner of the B.C. Jockey Club which operates the track that "there probably won't be racing there this year."

Diamond's comment came after the Jockey Club objected to a $150 daily licence fee sought by North Saanich Council.

The meeting was scheduled to run from Sept. 16 to Oct. 14.

NEW BARNS DUE

Diamond was also disturbed over council's ban on travel trailers parked at the track, demands for sanitary and cooking facilities in the barns and a recommendation that fire sprinklers be installed in present barns and any new barns. The track suffered a $150,000 loss last October when fire razed two enclosed barns. Earlier the Jockey Club said new barns would be erected for the 1967 meeting.

The threat of no racing was viewed with concern by Victorians.

"I hope they don't shut it (racing) off," said Nick North, president of the Victoria Visitors' Bureau.

"We need it. It creates interest in the fall, just as the tourist business begins to fall off."

SHOCK TO SOME

Thoroughbred owner George Harknett said Diamond's announcement "came as a shock."

"The whole thing seems to stem from the government's bite (tax on mutuel play). The whole structure — government, everything — needs overhauling."

Colin Murdoch of Woodland Stock Farm said, "I can't believe it. Racing makes the village boom for a month. I think Diamond was right. Council should study whether racing can stand an extra $150 a day.

"It's necessary for Sandown to operate for breeders on Vancouver Island. If you lose Sandown, you lose your Island breeders."

Diamond was unavailable for further comment early today. But a Jockey Club spokesman said the co-owner was "serious about this."

The spokesman said that the future of Sandown was to be discussed at a Jockey Club meeting today.

Hockey Fans Force Change in TV Policy

NEW YORK (CP) — The screams of local hockey fans, shortchanged Sunday on the initial telecast of the NHL Game of the Week, has forced an abrupt change in programming policy at WOR-TV.

The RKO station announced Tuesday that the Sunday afternoon NHL games will be carried to their conclusion in future.

Termination of the initial telecast at 6 p.m., with Chicago Black Hawks leading Detroit Red Wings 3-2 and nearly 15 minutes to play, caused the WOR switchboard to light up like a Christmas tree.

Those hockey fans who couldn't get through to WOR proved their tenacity by calling Madison Square Garden or anywhere else that their protest might be received.

The score of the game didn't change, but the minds of station executives did.

GOT BURNING LETTERS

A station spokesman would not say how many protests were received by telephone, but admitted "quite a few" letters came in the next day.

The publicity office of New York Rangers received more than 100 calls, although that team was not involved with the production. It also received a letter summing up the main complaint. It said: "Some bananahead in charge allowed only two hours for a live hockey game."

In abject surrender, the local station said Tuesday it will show in full the next seven games.

Yanks Sign Pair

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran southpaw Al Downing and rookie right-hander Stan Bahnsen have signed their 1967 baseball contracts. This brings to 15 the number under contract to the Yanks for next season.

BREWER THINKS SO . . . . . . EUROPEANS READY

Global Hockey Around Corner?

CALGARY (CP) — Carl Brewer, former National Hockey League star, said Tuesday he understands a new world hockey league, including the Canadian national team for which he now plays, could be formed "within a few years."

He said in a telephone interview from Toronto: "This is what I gather from conversations with people in the area of our national hockey and people in the National Hockey League."

The former Toronto Maple Leaf defenceman said the league could include Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Canada and possibly a German team, playing a regular schedule.

Brewer said on the CBC-TV show Front Page Challenge, broadcast live from Toronto Monday night, the new league is a distinct possibility "from what I have heard."

In the interview with the Calgary Herald, Brewer said: "European hockey has improved so much it has to be recognized.

"Costs are no fact," he added. "Don't forget European hockey fans are an enthusiastic breed . . . they have attendances at their games in the 20,000 to 25,000 range."

Asked if the new league would be professional, Brewer countered:

"What is a professional and what is an amateur? I think a new international league would call for a redefinition of what an athlete is."

Brewer said he doubted if the new league would be part of an expanded National Hockey League.

"In all the conversations I have heard it would be a world international league. Where, or whether, the NHL fits into it I wouldn't know."

League Clears Snag in Dates

TORONTO (CP) — Dick Walsh, of Los Angeles, commissioner of the new North American Soccer League, said Tuesday the schedule for the coming season will end in time for Scottish League teams to take part.

The North American circuit is inviting soccer teams from the United Kingdom and Europe to represent 10 member cities in the United States and two in Canada this season.

Hibernians of the Scottish League said Monday they would not be able to represent Toronto if the NASL went through with plans to continue its schedule to July 25. Other Scottish League clubs were reported considering withdrawal as well.

HAVE SOLUTION

"We have talked back and forth to England and we are satisfied we have worked out a solution," Walsh said.

The schedule will begin on May 28 and end July 9 with the championship game July 16.

Kenneth MacIntyre, a Hibernian director, said Monday his club asked a solution by Tuesday. "If they can arrange to finish 10 days earlier and bring our matches closer together, then we'll be delighted to go."

Five other clubs have been announced as NASL entries—Dundee United which will represent Dallas, Aberdeen which will represent Washington, Stoke City representing Cleveland, Sunderland representing Vancouver and Glentoran representing Detroit.

Walsh said the remaining six NASL cities—Boston, Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Houston — have overseas clubs lined up and will announce them soon.

BONNER CHARGES:

Opposition Has 20-20 Hindsight

By GLEN ALLEN

Opening Valentine's Day debate in the legislature Tuesday, Attorney-General Robert Bonner handed Opposition parties a bouquet of poisoned arrows.

Replying to NDP and Liberal charges that the government had financed Peace and Columbia River power projects at the expense of schools and hospitals ("power before people,") Mr. Bonner said their sloganeering put "confusion before people."

Mr. Bonner said that despite opposition "20-20 hindsight" the facts are simple.

He said that between February, 1966 and this month, more school construction bonds — worth $72 million — had been sold than ever before.

And he said school construction units, both classrooms and gymnasiums, were 500 above 1964 figures.

He said hospital construction had accelerated at a similar rate.

In an 80-minute speech which drew much comment from all parties in the House, Mr. Bonner charged the opposition with failing to lay their charges in detail.

"Which highway would not have been built?

"Which building would not have been constructed?

"Which project among the projects in B.C. would government have urged industry to delay?"

Mr. Bonner said despite the fact it was "not acknowledged," the provincial School Capital Financing Act is a triumph of financial organization.

The Hospital Financing Authority, announced in the House Friday "puts the credit of the province behind a major social need."

Mr. Bonner said the record showed that if the official opposition had been in charge of power projects their policy would have been a "policy of blackout."

DEEP FREEZE

"Theirs was not a policy for boom, but a policy for deep freeze."

He quoted an opposition member as accusing the Social Credit government in 1959 of "plucking the Peace River project out of the 1980s where it belongs."

He said plans of power projects detailed by the CCF party (as it then was named), called for a development of the Liard and Clearwater Rivers before the Peace and Columbia.

He questioned what the opposition "might have done had they been in power."

NOT ANY EASIER

Mr. Bonner also said that because of the "negative and destructive utterances," financing of the power projects "wasn't going to be made any easier."

Over the comment of Premier Bennett that the NDP party was "Barron's mouthpiece" (Barron's is a financial journal critical of Premier Bennett's fiscal policies), Mr. Bonner said, "the people in New York don't know that these people don't know what they are talking about."

He charged the opposition, "is asking us to embrace a system which we pioneered."

Blast Wrecks Montreal Block, Girl Missing

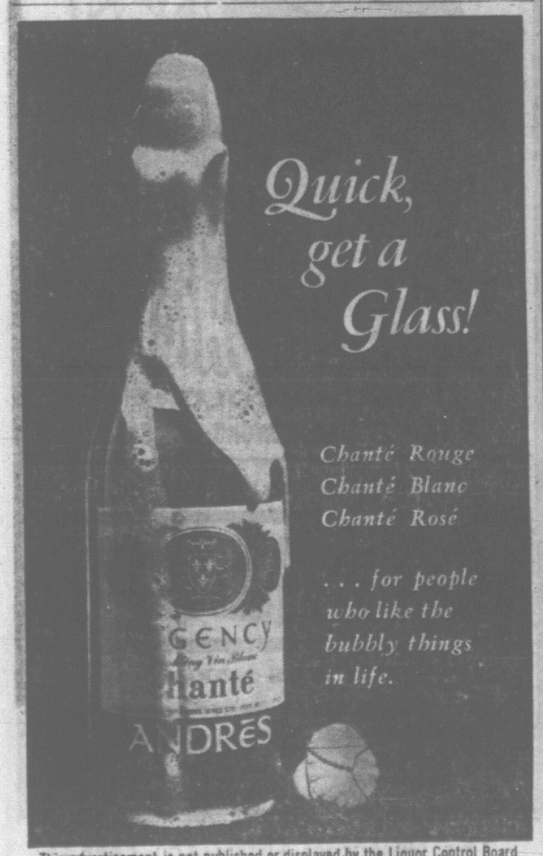

MONTREAL (CP)—A teenaged girl was believed killed and nine perons were injured Tuesday night when an explosion and fire wrecked a three-storey apartment block in suburban Mount Royal.

Police said Francoise Clement, 18, was trapped inside the building.

About 50 persons escaped unhurt.

The explosion occurred shortly after 9 p.m., ripping through a dozen dwellings in the Queen Elizabeth Apartments on Graham Boulevard in the community on the northern slopes of Mount Royal.

Other apartments in the 25-dwelling development were either destroyed or heavily damaged by fire.

$2 Million-Plus Deficit Faced by Provinces, Cities

British Columbia is "not going to pick up its marbles and walk out of Confederation," if federal equity is denied it, Attorney-General Robert Bonner told the legislature Tuesday.

He made the comment after delivering an ominous prophecy about federal-provincial cost-sharing.

He said while he loved "the dear old BNA Act" with its "air of certainty, it is clear the provinces are under notice they are to be placed on their own resources."

He said the Tax Structure Committee Report (Nov. 1966) showed the provinces and municipalities are heading for a "two-billion-plus deficit" by 1971.

He said the federal government had the same doom in its future.

He said to head the deficit off it "will take all our wit and all our resources."

He reiterated, however, the "continuing disputation" in federal-provincial cost-sharing arrangements would not make B.C. withdraw from Canada.

Alberta To Curb LSD

EDMONTON (UPI)— Legislation will be introduced shortly to "rigidly control" the use of LSD in Alberta, Premier Manning told the legislature Tuesday.

Rejected Torpedo Adopted For RCN, Committee Told

OTTAWA (CP) — Retired Rear-Admiral Jeffry Brock said Tuesday the American Asroc torpedo was once considered for the Royal Canadian Navy but was discarded because it could not distinguish between an enemy and friendly submarine.

The Asroc system has since been adopted for installation in seven RCN Restigouche class destroyers.

But up to late 1964 at least, he said, the problem of the torpedo identifying an enemy submarine "seemed insoluble."

"It didn't seem desirable," he added, "to have a weapon which a destroyer commander was reluctant to release."

It Was a Cold, Cold Day For (Un)Laughing Lester

By PETE LOUDON

The arena was cold, the crowd was cold and there's probably more laughter at a post mortem.

They love him at Las Vegas, he said. In fact he suggested everybody jump on a plane and go there with him.

"There's certainly nothing doing here," he added.

He wasn't quite right. If the Lester humor didn't connect, accordionist Ricky Mann did. He stirred the crowd with Downtown and Never On Sunday and proved why the U.S. entertainment scene was quick to steal him from Canada.

Ventriloquist Clifford Guest offered something different. His sound impressions of a spacecraft launching, of baying hounds at a hunt were a delight. And even those who have seen the dummy in the suitcase routine laughed again at his antics.

Emcee John Dunbar, who was playing it straight, got one of the biggest laughs of the first show when he gave Mr. Guest a terrific build-up introduction — then forgot his name. They should put it into the script.

GUEST

LESTER

Carell Heath, the acrobatic juggler who performs balanced on a unicycle or a ladder, pleased the children. Her rare talents didn't get the hand they deserved, maybe because there's too much of it on television while the main attractions are warming up.

Highways Minister Phil Gaglardi was another performer. He cut the ribbon opening the show and chose the opportunity to remind the audience that most car dealers are honest. The promoters missed an opportunity to have him sing a duet with Mr. Dunbar. Mr. Dunbar did fine by himself. But it's an idea for next year.

Recording artists Homer and Jethro didn't get here due to a last-minute illness. Neither did most of the anticipated opening night crowd. But the show goes on all week, three times a day.

DIVORCES

Three actions for divorce were heard in Victoria Law Courts Monday — the shortest list this year.

Florence R. Brooks, 727 Lampson Street, Esquimalt, from William Brooks, 1405 Gladstone Avenue, Victoria. They were married at Altrincham, Chester, England, in 1939.

CREDITISTE

Foreign Student Aid Rapped

OTTAWA (CP) — Raymond Langlois Creditiste-Magantic, charged Tuesday night that Canadian aid to foreign students was unfair to Canadian students and also wasn't doing what it was intended to do.

He said foreign students receive an average of $5,467 a year to study in Canada. He said many of these students were brilliant so they didn't have to study hard and were well-enough off to change cars every year.

In contrast, some Canadian students worked at nights in restaurants to pay tuition costs and thus "an injustice was being done to them."

Where were the promised scholarships in the Liberal election campaign, he asked.

He also said the easy life enjoyed by the foreign students led them to either stay in Canada or move to another country where they were readily accepted.

Yet the aim of foreign aid to students was to provide them with skills to help their own countries.

IN KOREAN PAGODA

Oldest Printed Text Uncovered

NEW YORK (AP)—A Columbia University professor disclosed today that Korean scholars have found a Buddhist scroll in the stonework of a South Korean pagoda that is believed to be the oldest printed text yet discovered. It dates to the eighth century.

"The discovery was made last October," said Dr. Gari Ledyard, an assistant professor of Korean at Columbia.

"From the Korean press reports I read and the Korean scholars I talked to in and out of New York, I have no doubts about it.

"It's possible they could have made a mistake, but I doubt it. I see no reason to doubt it. It's quite reasonable in the light of what is known about printing. We know of printing existing in Japan from around 770."

Ledyard said the pagoda was built in 751 AD and carries a text translated from Sanskrit into Chinese no later than 704. He said the scroll, which is 20 to 21 feet long, is believed to have been printed between 751 and 704.

Ledyard said the discovery was made last Oct. 14 but "it's a great puzzle to me" why it wasn't disclosed sooner.

Ledyard said 12 separate wooden blocks were used to make the impressions.

"The scroll was pretty much damaged," he said.

Muggsy Spanier Dies

SAUSALITO, Calif. (AP) — Jazz cornetist Muggsy Spanier died in his sleep Sunday, apparently of a heart attack. A stepson, Tom Gries, said Spanier had not worked since the Newport Jazz Festival in 1964.

Wharf Collapses

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A wharf crowded with people watching a fire in Bangkok collapsed Sunday night and police reported that 20 persons are missing and presumed drowned. The fire left several hundred persons homeless but there was no loss of life.

PROMOTE TRAILS

New Group Formed For Outdoor Types

A new club for British Columbia's outdoor types has been formed.

Called Trails Unlimited, it is a branch of the B.C. Horse Owners' Association but is for hikers, cyclists, and others interested in fresh air activities, as well as for horseback riders.

"We do want all outdoor clubs to participate," said Shirley Pike, secretary of the Vancouver Island branch which was formed at a weekend meeting at Strawberry Vale Community Hall.

MissPike said the aims of Trails Unlimited will be to "discover trails around here and all over B.C."

She said members of the group would like to make bridle trails, city and provincial park trails, and paths like the old West Coast trail, more available for general use.

The group is hoping for government backing.

They will also press for shoulder construction on roads and highways, so horses won't be banned for damaging blacktop.

A protest arose from several outdoorsmen at the Sunday meeting about horsemen trespassing on local hiking trails. Miss Pike pointed to the example of Burnaby outdoors groups where "horsemen and hikers are getting along very well together."

A membership fee of $10 for a club and $2 for an individual will mean inclusion in the B.C. Horse Owners' Association as well as in Trails Unlimited.

A meeting date for the local Trails Unlimited branch will be set soon. Interested persons may call Miss Pike at 479-3814.

Premiere Of Film Friday

The premiere showing of Victoria's own movie "Townscape Rediscovered" will be held Friday night at the University of Victoria.

Mayor Hugh Stephen will chair the film showing scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Arts Building Auditorium.

L. J. Wallace, chairman of the B.C. Centennial Commission Committee, and Professor Tony Emery of Uvic will introduce the showing.

The film was started by a small group of local people interested in maintaining a historical record of the changes brought by the Centennial Square complex.

It was later adopted by the Centennial Commission and blossomed as a full-feature movie.

After the Victoria showing the movie will cross Canada for showing in major cities as a model of downtown development.

Sale of Art To Help Fund

Paintings by Elizabeth and Owen Goward will be displayed in St. George's Church Hall, 3909 St. Georges Lane, Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Thursday's showing will start at 8 p.m. Friday's will be from 2 to 10 p.m. and Saturday's from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Proceeds will go to St. George's Church building fund.

A Tisket A Tusker For His Love

"I'm going to stuff it on the back porch," he said.

The baby elephant had been in a cold storage company freezer for five years. The owner had it frozen after it died so he would have evidence in a suit he planned against the people who sold it to him.

But the owner never came back, storage fees grew, and the Clackamas County sheriff's office decided to auction it.

Williams, 23, of Corvallis, bought it for $51. He is a biologist for the Oregon Game Commission.

Mrs. Williams, 21, was pleased about the gift, but looking down at the 1,000-pound carcass said:

"It's not as big as I thought it would be."

Williams, an amateur taxidermist, said he may offer it to clubs, fraternities, or "Maybe the Republican party would be interested."

Canadian Destroyers In Near Collision

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (CP) —Two Canadian destroyer-escorts narrowly missed colliding Monday while on manoeuvres about 25 miles off Puerto Rico. One officer said later the warships were only split-seconds away from a major disaster.

The incident occurred while four destroyer-escorts were taking part in a joint naval operation titled Springboard '67, involving American, Canadian, British and Dutch units.

Esquimalt-based destroyer-escorts Saskatchewan and Mackenzie also are involved in the exercise.

The destroyer-escorts Assiniboine, Margaree, Chaudiere and Ottawa were engaged in high-speed manoeuvres at close quarters when the Ottawa's wheel locked while in a sharp turn to port.

She cut across the paths of the Margaree and Assiniboine, forcing them to make emergency turns to starboard.

The Ottawa, steaming at about 25 knots, gave an emergency signal—six short, shrill blasts—after her wheel locked and before she was able to switch to emergency steering. Officers said she missed colliding with the Margaree by only about 60 feet.

Men aboard the Ottawa began scrambling for safety as the Margaree appeared to be heading straight for her midships.

In an interview aboard the Chaudiere, Capt. A. L. Collier, commander of the Seventh Canadian Escort Squadron, which includes the four destroyer-escorts, praised the officers and men involved for their quick work.

"It's not the sort of thing I would want to go through again," Capt. Collier said, "but it shows we're playing for keeps down here.

Court Orders Man To Pay for Damage

Roderick Palm, 24, of 102 South Turner, was fined $35 on each of four counts of wilful damage under $50 Tuesday in central court.

Palm was convicted of breaking a side view mirror on a truck and radio aerials on three cars Feb. 10.

He was also ordered to make restitution for damages.

Wine Found on Youth

Garry P. Busch, 19, of 1946 View, paid $35 in central court Tuesday after pleading guilty to being a minor in possession of liquor.

Court was told he was charged after being found in possession of wine Jan. 27.

Baby Bank Will Be Reality By Year 2000; Freeze Cells

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — A biology professor Sunday predicted the future of a baby bank into which young married couples can deposit human reproductive cells and draw out children years later.

H. Bentley Glass, professor of biology at the State University of New York, said that by freezing the reproductive cells a man could sire children even after his death.

Glass, speaking before the 99th annual convention of the American Association of School Administration, said the baby bank could become a reality by the year 2,000.

As Glass envisioned the concept, human reproductive cells of both sexes would be frozen and deposited in a bank, as is now common with sheep and cattle.

Genetic surgery would yield portions of human ovaries and tests from which human embryos could be created in a laboratory. Another factor from such a procedure would be that such an embryo could be implanted in the womb of a mother unable to have her own child.

"From the standpoint of eugenics," Glass said, "parents should have their babies while they are young. From the standpoint of economics and population control, marriage is often too long postponed and children are produced by parents in their 30s and 40s."

By putting their reproductive cells into a baby bank when they are young, Glass explained, parents could have children in their late 30s with their "best" cells.

The freezing of these cells over generations would make it possible for men to sire children even after they are dead.

Glass also predicted that within 30 years scientists will be able to create some form of life in a laboratory.

Glass also noted that such a procedure would benefit children born later in life to men or women who work in hazardous environs, such as astronauts who are exposed to high energy radiation.

In forecasting the creation of life, Glass said the first forms will be made at the level of complexity of a virus. He said that such forms of created life might lead to reproduction control that could eliminate genetic defects.

'Hot-Line by the Sea' Chant's Valentine's Day Wish to Legislature

Public Works Minister William Chant's Valentine's Day wish Tuesday was that the legislature, that august repository of Victoriana, become the "hot-line" by the harbor.

"So much of the debate here has been repetitious," Mr. Chant told the House in his contribution to the budget debate," that Hansard would just be a waster of the taxpayers' money."

Mr. Chant said "it would improve standards of debate" if, instead of a written record of proceedings, members be "put on live radio.

"For every one reading Hansard there would be 1,000 listening.

"I know it would interefere with our press friends, but going over radio, it would not be re-edited.

"Would you put a 'beep' in it?" asked Dave Barrett (NDP—Coquitlam).

"I don't need a 'beep' while you're there," said the minister.

"Why not television?" shouted another opposition member.

If the hubbub surrounding Mr. Chant's speech had been broadcast, listeners would have found themselves reaching for the volume control.

In addition to a defence of the government's budget ("what is there in it that isn't for people?") and a disquisition on socialism, Mr. Chant asked for a four-lane highway from Swartz Bay to Victoria.

CARELESS DRIVERS

Fined Tuesday in traffic court for careless driving were: Kenneth Lotzien, Lake Cowichan, $75 (and a three month licence suspension); and Dennis Cubitt, 860 Lampson, $35.

'NEW LIGHT' TO BATHE CASTLE

Craigdarroch Preservation Society will complete its floodlighting project by that date. The final touches will add $2,200 to about $5,000 spent by the society since 1962.

All lights will be extinguished until the project is complete. When they go on the towers and turrets will be visible at night from all parts of the city.

Society president J. K. Nesbitt said power will cost about $250 a year. The costs are met by the 130-member society and through donations. Lumber baron H. R. MacMillan and former lieutenant-governor Frank Ross have each made recent gifts of $250. Other supporters live in Vancouver, Calgary, Oregon, and as far away as Pennsylvania.

"We think sometimes that outsiders are more interested in the castle than are Victorians themselves," Mr. Nesbitt said.

The famous edifice was built a century ago in the style of a Scottish castle by coal and railway developer Robert Dunsmuir to honor his wife. He died before it was finished.

ODDS-ON-CHOICE to be named U.S. attorney-general by President Johnson is Ramsey Clark, 39. He is the son of Associate Justice Tom Clark of the U.S. Supreme Court, and has been acting attorney-general since Oct. 3. (AP Wirephoto)

RITES TODAY THURSDAY FOR MALAHAT VICTIMS

Medical Evidence Given at Inquest

Funerals for four teen-agers who were victims of a Malahat car accident last Saturday were to take place today and Thursday.

An inquest into the four deaths opened Tuesday night when medical evidence was taken and the bodies released. The inquest will reconvene at 7:30 p.m., March 14 at the Law Courts.

Funerals were held today for Eric Shawn Adams, 19, and Alexandra (Sandra) Laws, 16. Services are set for Thursday for Janice Rosemary (Janet) Chiasson, 15 and for David York, 18.

The York youth died at St. Joseph's Hospital Tuesday; the others at the time of the accident. He lived at 786 Goldstream. Details on next of kin were not released. Funeral will be at 1 p.m. Thursday at Sand's Colwood Chapel with burial at Hatley Memorial Gardens.

An inquest into the four deaths opened Tuesday night when medical evidence was taken and the bodies released. The inquest will reconvene at 7:30 p.m., March 14 at the Law Courts.

The Adams funeral was held this afternoon at Sands Chapel in Victoria followed by burial in Hatley Memorial Gardens. He was born in Morse, Sask., but had lived here for 17 years at 3114 Mars. He is survived by his parents Mrs. H. E. Adams and Mr. G. W. C. Adams, brothers George and Raymond, two married sisters and a foster father, M. G. Harris.

The Laws funeral and cremation was set for today in Victoria. Miss Laws was born here and lived at 184 Joseph Street. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David L. Laws and her brother David.

Prayers will be offered tonight at Sands Mortuary in Victoria for Miss Chiasson, at 8 p.m. Mass will be held at St. Andrew's Cathedral Thursday at 3 p.m. by Rev. Maurice Costello followed by burial at Royal Oak.

Miss Chiasson was born in Victoria and lived at 1225 Rudlin. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Chiasson, a married sister and a brother here and two brothers at Powell River.

The inquest into the four deaths heard Dr. Bruce Hay, St. Joseph's pathologist, testify that the Adams youth was killed by head injury involving severe brain damage and the breastbone and spine were fractured.

Head and internal injuries caused the death of Miss Laws and Miss Chiasson died from internal injuries. Head wounds caused the death of the York youth.

Details of the accident in which the car in which the four were riding plunged off the Malahat Highway, will be probed when the inquest is reopened.

Tests for Robarts

TORONTO (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario will remain in hospital in London, Ont., until tests reveal the cause of internal bleeding discovered Tuesday, a spokesman in the premier's office said today.

Federal Pensioners Ask Immediate Hike

Retired federal civil servants asked the federal government Tuesday to increase their pensions in line with the current cost of living.

About 350 members of the Federal Superannuates National Association in this area joined in submission of a brief to the Senate-Commons Committee on employer-employee relations in the public service of Canada.

The brief asks that automatic increases be paid to pensioners in a system linked to the Consumer Price Index.

Where a pensioner dies the full pension should be continued for one year and 75 per cent of the pension should be paid thereafter, the petitioners state.

The also request a re-calculation of all pensions based on a six-year average salary according to today's scale of payments.

The brief concludes:

"We recognize fully the government's difficulties in trying to combat the spectre of inflation. It is nevertheless evident that in one way or another every stratum of Canadian society is striving to secure an increased income to counteract the rising cost of living.

"This is being achieved in many cases by agreement; in other cases, strike action is being used or threatened; in two cases, at least — those of veterans' pensions and old age pensions — the government has voluntarily recognized the need.

"In one case only — that of former government employees — has nothing been done or proposed. Surely the mere recapitulation of these facts should be sufficient to bring speedy remedial action."

Remanded In Slayings

VANCOUVER (CP) — Thomas Gordon Kosberg, 18, charged with six counts of captital murder in the Dec. 10, 1965, axe slayings of his parents and two brothers and two sisters, was remanded one week after being raised to adult court Monday.

The youth was originally charged with five counts of delinquency in the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Kosberg and three of their children, Barry, 15, Gayle, 11, and two-year-old Vincent. The fourth child, Marianne, 13, died nine days later from severe head wounds.

Kosberg was released from Riverview Mental Hospital Wednesday and was judged mentally fit to stand trial on the juvenile charges, prior to being raised to adult court. The juvenile charges were dropped.

Crash Kills Seven

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Seven persons were killed Sunday when a luxury executive-type light airplane crashed into a field. The accident happened southeast of Johannesburg, near Balfour.

FOREST INDUSTRIES

Business Tax Claimed Unfair

The council of B.C. Forest Industries asked Tuesday for abolition of municipal business tax.

It made the request in a brief to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell.

The council said it was alarmed by the "increasing dollar tax burden and inequities" that it sees developing through present taxation policies.

It argued the business tax is unfair because it falls on only a segment of the community.

The brief said relatively few firms often supply a large proportion of a municipality's revenue and pointed to North Cowichan as an example where two forest industry firms pay, through business tax, the equivalent of 63 per cent of all levies for general purposes.

If the government is not prepared to abolish the business tax, then it should take "interim minimum alternative measures" including elimination of machinery taxes, classification of firms into different tax categories and limitation of total business tax levies to 10 per cent of general levies.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15, 1967--PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

South in the outdoors-minded city of Bellevue, Wash., there lives an expatriate British Columbian whom this column has indirectly landed in a jackpot both deep and dire.

The victim's name is W. Wallis, and he came to my attention when one of his Victoria relatives called me a few days ago.

Mr. Wallis, I learned, is not only a sport fisherman but a man who likes to talk about fishing, when he can get a word in edgewise. Since Bellevue is situated in pretty fair steelhead country, this is by no means easy.

However, when the talk turned to record fish, a while back, he managed in a modest sort of way to suggest that B.C. steelies are just beginning to make their growth at the point where Washington's leave off.

"We hold the world record on both commercial and sport gear with a 43 and a 36-pounder," he told his skeptical listeners, "and here's a clipping to prove it!"

At this crucial point, we will return to the relative who phoned me. "But he had lost the clipping," says she, "and the only way he can convince people he's not a world-record liar is by getting another!"

Well, far be it from me to leave any B.C. booster in that fix. I have sent our exile not one but two clippings . . . and if those don't convince the doubters, there are others up here in the homeland of big steelhead who will corroborate my facts.

Among the quiet wars of peace is Greater Victoria Water District's struggle with a deer population that regards its new crop evergreen seedlings as choice fodder.

No sooner would an area be planted with Douglas firs to replace those harvested in the water district's model selective logging operation, than the deer would seek them out. Overnight, they would browse a sidehill clear of its little new trees.

Supposedly repellant chemical sprays and foul-smelling compounds failed to deter them. The deer considered these mere sauces to whet their appetites for an evergreen snack. Controlled hunting seasons on the watershed hardly left a dint, and the cougar that frequent those woods served only to keep the blacktail bands in healthy balance.

So it went until a couple of years ago, when the water district guardians decided that nothing but deer-proof fences would save the young growth.

Plantings are now securely enclosed by eight-foot wire mesh fences which will remain until the young trees reach a "safe" height of over five feet. At present, the water district strings from 5,000 to 10,000 feet of fence a year, and is thoroughly satisfied with the results.

"We're comfortably off with the deer now," Ron Upward tells me. "They bounce from the wire with no harm to the fence or themselves. We do have a few bear too, though, and when they're travelling, they don't like to change course. When a bear comes to one of our fences he charges straight through, and leaves a second break on the other side of the protected area."

Posts are no problem — the loggers split them from cedar windfalls — and eventually, a nylon mesh still in the experimental stage may replace the metal wire. The nylon would disintegrate in about 10 years, by which time trees are past the stage where they tickle blacktail palates.

The honest hunter has taken many a black eye in recent years because of the antics of a hot-trigger brigade that welcomes the slightest excuse to pepper any and all targets.

In addition to the human casualties these rack up through the idiotic practice of "sound-shooting" at anything that rustles, they also indulge themselves in a wide range of vandal tactics.

Of these, the most noxious is the cruel sort of caper that reduced a reef-bound Newfoundland whale to a mass of infected blubber.

Why they do it, I'll never know — but eventually, the irresponsibles who blast off so wantonly are going to bring about a near if not total ban on sporting firearms.

Barbering by Bob Bierman

The Great Centennial Cover-Up

By PETE LOUDON

Beards are in.

General chairman L. J. Wallace of the provincial planning committee says so.

"Beards fit into the general theme of centennial celebrations very well," he said in an interview.

Beards in recent years have been the badge of the beatnik, worn often as a protest against conformity. But not any more.

Beards worn in our centenary of Confederation do honor to our pioneers, he said. He pointed out that many organizations are holding beard-growing contest. And many men are growing them individually, without prompting.

These include university students, civil servants, one member of the legislature, people in all categories.

But so far there isn't a hair to be seen on the chins of any member of the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of British Columbia.

When this was mentioned to Mr. Wallace, Mr. Wallace just said, "Ha."

He quickly went on to say that a provincial beard-growing contest is a major feature of the Williams Lake Stampede on July 1.

We told Mr. Wallace that some beard growers have phoned the Times to say they have been objects of ridicule.

One wife complained that people who josh her husband about his beard do not connect his efforts with the national trend toward honoring our bearded forefathers.

She said his efforts should be given support of the centennial planners. Mr. Wallace has complied with bare-faced enthusiasm.

And the Times artist, in the pictures above, has provided Mr. Wallace with a collection of beard styles because he hasn't had time to make a choice.

Anyone deciding to go hairy over beards in Greater Victoria may make dough while they grow. Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a multi-prize contest as a highlight of its annual exhibition and fair in May. Beards must be started since Jan. 1, and entries close May 1.

Pair Injured In One of Two Car Accidents

David Bellamy, 2355 Bellamy, told Colwood RCMP he was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car.

An estimated $1,500 damage was done to the car, police said.

One man suffered a broken foot and another head cuts when their car ran off the Patricia Bay Highway near Amity Tuesday night.

Archie Jones of Sidney and Leonard Norris of Chemainus were treated at Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney. The car was proceeding south on the highway said Sidney RCMP, who are still investigating.

'Company' Man Denies Causing Disturbance

A man who said he was employed "in a manner of speaking" with the Company of Young Canadians, pleaded not guilty today in central court to a charge of causing a disturbance.

Bail was set at $100.

A companion, Phyllis Robertson, 18, of 919 Vancouver St., pleaded guilty to the same charge and was remanded to Feb. 22 for a pre-sentence report.

The two were arrested after "shouting and screaming" was reported on the north side of the 700 block Yates St. at 8:55 p.m. Tuesday.

A city police officer said 25 persons were in the area at the time.

Questioning Venables, Magistrate Ostler asked if he was employed.

"In a manner of speaking," he answered. He said he was on the Victoria staff of the Company of Young Canadians.

Guns Stolen At Airport

Five guns were stolen from the offices of Vancouver Island Helicopters at Victoria International Airport over Monday night, police report.

Four are semi-automatic .22 calibre pitsols and another was described as a .32.

Ask The Times

Q. Who have more heart ailments, men or women? V.M.

A. Provincial health department puts men in the lead. In 1965 B.C. hospitals treated 17,022 heart disease cases—56.15 per cent were male and 43.85 per cent female.

Q. What is the salary of a deputy minister in the provincial service? T.H.

A. Some receive $20,000 and some $19,000 plus certain expenses. This is more than the ministers they serve, who receive salaries of $17,500. But their sessional allowances, etc., $6,500 basic, push them ahead again.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problmes. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Vancouver's Home Stays, Too Costly to Move Here

Captain George Vancouver's home will not be coming to British Columbia.

That's the gist of a letter from G. S. Gibson, deputy agent-general for B.C. in London, England.

Writing to H. P. Plasterer, 340 Island Highway, one of the local residents pushing for purchase of Captain Vancouver's birthplace and the restoration of the home in B.C., Mr. Gibson said the cost would be prohibitive.

The deputy agent-general also said there is some doubt that the King's Lynn house in question was the birthplace of the illustrious sea captain who put B.C. on the map.

'NO RESEMBLANCE'

"There is a small remaining section of what used to be the home of John Vancouver, the captain's father, who was a collector of dues in the borough of King's Lynn. This is in a parlous state of repair, and has been altered over the years so that it now bears no resemblance to its former state," the letter says.

Floor joists have been cut out and replaced by new timbers and the brick walls are so crumbly that even careful demolition would result in irrepairable damage, Mr. Gibson continues.

"The arched doorway shown in B.C. papers of a few days ago is not the door to this building, but was the door of the Friends Meeting House," the letter states.

NO RECORD

While Captain Vancouver undoubtedly spent some of his childhood in the house in question, there is no record to say that he was born there.

"Vancouver senior lived there, and undoubtedly Captain Vancouver likewise, but there is no record to say that he was born there, in the large house, and certainly he would not have been born in the remaining section," Mr. Gibson wrote. "In that day this piece must have been a workshop or storage room."

Even if the house in question was the birthplace of Captain Vancouver, Mr. Gibson stated that the cost of dismantling it and shipping it to B.C. would run between $20,000 and $25,000.

And, he added, that would not include the cost of rebuilding.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, who along with Liberal MLA Alan Macfarlane, had expressed interest in acquiring the historic property for B.C. display, said such a purchase now was "obviously out."

'CADET WITH A DIFFERENCE' REWARDED FOR GOOD CONDUCT

Officer cadet Gerald Kelly was presented today with the Canadian Forces Decoration in a ceremony at Canadian Forces School Venture.

And the decoration is awarded for 12 years good conduct service.

It just so happened that Cadet Kelly was accepted for officer training at the same time he completed 12 years with the air force.

Government Violates Ad Laws Says Haynes

And, added B.C. Federation of Labour secretary Ray Haynes, "papers by printing these ads, and not saying to a person we can't print as it is a violation of the act, are also legally responsible."

His comments followed a warning by the B.C. labor department Tuesday that "numerous advertisements in the daily newspapers seeking applicants for employment" contravene the Fair Employment Practices Act.

The department, in a widely-circulated statement, sought the "co-operation of everyone" in complying with the act.

Advertisements by the B.C. Civil Service Commission contain a restriction that only Commonwealth citizens are acceptable.

Recent advertisements use the words "candidates must be Commonwealth citizens" and "applicants must be Commonwealth citizens" and "requires Commonwealth citizenship."

A labor department spokesman confirmed that the government is not legally bound by the Fair Employment Practices Act.

No act passed by the legislature applies to the government unless the act states so.

Under the Fair Employment Practices Act, "no person shall use or circulate any form of application or publish any advertisement in connection with employment" which expresses "any limitation, specification or preference as to the race, religion, color, nationality, ancestry or place of origin of any person."

The labor department said it is "clearly improper," under the legislation to use words such as boy, girl and young and phrases designating exclusive age groups, such as "20 to 30 years."

Mr. Haynes commented it is "about time" the department took some action. The federation had repeatedly asked the government to do this.

IT MAY NO LONGER be as vital to Victoria's domestic water supply as it once was, but Smith's Hill reservoir still plays an important role in other ways. The four-acre 18 million gallon water supply is looked on with favor by fire insurance underwriters who state that without that huge reserve, insurance rates would increase. The reservoir is owned by the Greater Victoria Water District but is useful only to the city. At a recent board meeting it was suggested that the city purchase the reservoir from the district—but retain it as a reservoir if for no other purpose than to hold insurance rates down. New Saanich Bylaw to Curb Roaming Dogs, Pets in Homes

Although no details are being disclosed, the bylaw is expected to take a much tougher attitude towards roaming dogs and their owners and may include restrictions on the number of pets allowed in homes.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said the bylaw "will be coming forward in a matter of some weeks."

Council has taken an increasingly stronger stand against roaming dogs, resulting in a score or more court cases recently.

"Our responsibility is to see Saanich is made safe from stray dogs, dog packs and hounds that are scavengers," he said.

"We must make streets safe for people. Animals must take a definite second place.

'BACK SEAT'

"I like dogs—in their place and under control. I like children and adults much more. In my book, dogs take a very definite back seat."

Under existing regulations, dogs must not be allowed at large unless accompanied and under control of a person or unless they are on a leash.

Dogs must not be allowed on public beaches, parks, commercial areas or public buildings unless on a leash and "no dog shall be allowed to bark persistently so as to disturb the quiet and peace of the neighborhood."

WORRIED

Reeve Curtis said kennel operators and dog fanciers have expressed fears they are "going to be interfered with.

"I have tried to indicate to them the bylaw will be reviewed with people like this and this is what we are aiming at.

"We are after dogs that don't appear to be cared for by owners."

The reeve indicated there will be a strengthening of the pound by adding a second truck.

New Exam Policy Detailed

Major Cutback Planned In High School Tests

Education Minister Leslie Peterson today announced a new examination policy will be introduced into the province's high schools this June.

The number of subjects in which students will have to write departmental examinations will be severely chopped to the elective subjects and the marks will only constitute half of the final grading.

Grading in required subjects will be handled entirely within the schools.

A special system of grade 12 examination on a voluntary basis will be established to qualify students for government scholarships.

TWO PARTS

These will be in two equal parts, each scored at 100 points.

The first part will encompass questions for students who must take the examination to graduate in their elective subject. The second part will be only for the scholarship candidates with special questions to test their ability in the subject.

Scholarship candidates will write at least two of the two-part examinations but they can write more if they wish and only their best two results will be counted.

"School marks will not enter into this scholarship examination which will be a direct competition among those candidates undertaking it," he said in a speech text prepared for delivery this afternoon in the legislature's budget debate.

Mr. Peterson said the new policy drops all departmental examinations except those "given at the Grade 12 level in the specialties of the academic and technical program.

EXTENSION

"Departmental examinations are therefore restricted to those courses in which the student has selected through his own interests or aims.

"This principle is only an extension of that which started many decades ago. It is possible only because of the increased training and professional development of secondary school staffs."

In addition, he said, even in those courses where departmental examinations will be required, the principle that written testing alone is insufficient to grade a pupil will be observed and the school's own evaluation of the student's work will count for 50 per cent of the final grade.

"In all examinable courses, the school's evaluation of the pupil's work will receive equal consideration with the evaluation on the basis of the departmental examination," he said.

Accredited schools will continue to be designated by the department permitting them "to recommend a proportion of their pupils without departmental examination in those subjects which they would normally write," Mr. Peterson added.

SANDOWN

Man Faces Charge In Fire

A man being held in custody on the Mainland is expected to be charged in connection with the $150,000 fire at Sandown race track last fall.

A former groom at Sandown, the man may be charged with "setting fire to a material likely to set fire" to buildings and property, it was learned.

The Oct. 16 blaze which broke out the night before the last day of the autumn meeting here killed 13 thoroughbred horses.

The B.C. fire marshal, who with RCMP officers and Saanich detectives investigated the fire, said the suspect's name cannot be released until he is formally charged.

RAN AT LARGE

It was first thought to have been caused by an electrical fault but that theory was discounted as the stables had just been rewired at a cost of $20,000.

Buildings at Sandown were insured for their replacement value.

Club Seeks Transfer Of Dates

B.C. Jockey Club will apply to the B.C. Racing Commission to transfer to Vancouver dates for horse racing at Sandown track near Sidney.

This was revealed today by Jack Diamond, co-owner of the jockey club, who announced Tuesday there would be no racing this year at Sandown.

Mr. Diamond's statement came after the Jockey Club and North Saanich council reached an impasse over licence fees and council demands for fire-fighting and sanitary improvements at the track.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner, to whom the Racing Commission is responsible, said he would have to study the application to transfer racing dates to the Mainland "but I would be personally disappointed if racing could not continue on the Saanich Peninsula".

"It has been quite a feature on the local scene, and well received. I would hope that local differences can be ironed out."

NO DECISION

The attorney-general said the government has made no decision to act on representations to lower the 21½ per cent mutuel tax, the highest in North America.

The budget before the current legislature does not contemplate any lowering of the tax and "I personally would not forecast that it would go down."

The Sandown meet was scheduled to run from Sept. 16 to Oct. 14.

Glen McDonald, chairman of the Racing Commission, declined to comment on the transfer application. But he pointed out that the commission denied a request "a few years ago to transfer the dates to Vancouver."

The commission then told Bill Randall "to go dark" (close Sandown) if he felt Sandown was a losing proposition but that we would not transfer the dates."

However, McDonald admitted that the commission "isn't bound today by yesterday's decision."

"We felt at the time that the dates shouldn't be transferred because it wouldn't be fair to the people of Victoria, the bettors and the people in the industry."

Mr. Diamond said the Jockey Club plans no meetings with the North Saanich council.

Seal Ornaments Ideal As Winter Gift Ideas

By Penny Saver

These last few chilly mornings have made me wonder if this is really Victoria or some subdivision of the Arctic. I'm all set to don a seal skin parka and mukluks and "mush" my way down town rather than try to start a cold car or tear madly down the street after a bus. Even the weatherman wasn't very encouraging one morning as I was about to set foot out the door. He said that the temperature was 36 degrees, perhaps colder in other areas. I'm sure it was our neighborhood that he referred to as "other areas."

While I was walking by one shop, thinking about the dastardly weather, I peeked in and the first thing I saw was a little seal ornament. (How ironical!) Out of spite, I bought one. These are really charming figures hand-made by Eskimos. They're actually made of seal fur, with leather paws and sweeping flippers behind. On the mantlepiece, they're ideal conversation-boosters. Seals make wonderful gifts too. Remember your lucky friends in the warm south with one of these. Price is $4.

One thing that always soothes my evil temper, whether it is aroused because of the weather or any other reason, is buying something "nice"—just for me. One shop has just that thing. They're tiny vials of perfume oil. These contain no alcohol at all so there is a minimum of evaporation (almost none at all) if you should forget to put the stopper on. Perfume oils are pure flower extracts and the faintest hint of the liquid lasts and lasts. There are 45 scents to choose from in this shop, in fragrances imported from all over the globe. They come in one-quarter-dram to one-dram bottles, selling from $2 to $4.

For something different at home, transform your living room into an exotic Arabian palace with the almost-intoxicating fragrance of incense. Try the cool fresh scent of pine balsam. There are many exhilarating fumes to choose from, priced at $1.25 the box. Try some next time you entertain.

Want to try something unique? Give me a call at 382-3131 and I'll tell you where to find these items.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

How's your willpower? Willing but weak? I have happy news for you if you are one of those very human beings, who have willing but weak willpower.

Lowman

All of you probably know about the liquid diets on the market which have 225 calories per can. However, you may not know that you can now buy canned figure-controlling meals. Every meal has three items, an appetizer (juice or soup), the main dish, and a dessert, each in its individual can, packaged in a tote-case. All of this for 300 calories a meal.

The main dish provides you with high quality proteins but with reduced fat. The fruits and juices are rich vitamin sources. No sugar is used, only an artificial sweetener when needed. Many of the sauces and desserts have a high content of non-fat milk solids. Therefore, the meals are nutritious as well as good. There are different menus to choose from.

I like to call your attention to such items because I think lots of dieters need help to get started on a reducing program. Therefore, it seems wise to take advantage of the many low calorie foods now on the market. They are too numerous to list here, but these are a few: Low-calorie substitute mayonnaise, salad dressings which have very low calorie counts, low-calorie breads, soft drinks, ice cream, chocolate sauce, sour cream, soups, canned fruits, jellies, jams and syrups—on and on it goes.

Of course, for the long haul, your menus should be more varied than the meals I have mentioned. However, you might find these helpful for a flying start or to use once a day.

Lots of women will not count calories accurately, either because they do not know the calorie counts or because they kid themselves. Others, when curtailing food intake, cut out foods which are essential to health.

It occurs to me that these meals might also be helpful to the person who lives alone. So many people will not cook at all adequately just for themselves.

A New You

by Emily Wilkens

DEAR EMILY WILKENS:

Book Bend: I carry a pile of heavy books back and forth to school every day. As a result I've become round-shouldered and have very bad posture. What can I do about it?—Valerie G.

Don't clutch your books to your chest. Instead shift them from arm to arm, or divide them into two equal piles. Don't load them all in one heavy briefcase or you'll develop a sloping shoulder.

To correct bad posture, the model trick of walking with a book on the head works wonders if done often enough.

Think tall. Pretend you have a string tied to the back of your head, behind your ears, pulling your head up. Then lift your rib cage up and out of your waistline.

Beetly Brows: My eyebrows are very heavy, with a mind of their own. How can I learn to tweeze them correctly and get the proper line?—Miss Gilda G.

Place a pencil at the side of your nose, holding it straight up. This is where your brow should begin. Then hold the pencil over the middle of the iris of your eye. This is where your brow should arch. Hold the pencil diagonally against your nose, slanting it up toward the outer corner of your eye. This is where your brow should end.

Use a magnifying mirror in good light, and gently remove direction in which they grow. Remove hairs from beneath the eyebrow only, never from above. Apply a hot compress before tweezing, and witch hazel afterward.

To smooth down unruly brows, apply petroleum jelly or use a beeswax stick.

Shy Snob: I'm always giving the wrong impression. I am very shy, but people think I'm a snob because I find it hard to talk and be friendly. What can I do?—Mrs. Harriet T.

It's quite true that shyness is often taken for snobbery. Force yourself to smile and look friendly, even if you're tongue-tied. Seek out another shy person (every room has at least two) and strike up a conversation. Practise self confidence by looking your best. Become an expert on a topic of interest, so you'll have something to talk about. Try not to worry about the impression you're making. Just be yourself.

Pore Problem: My skin is clear but the pores are very large and unattractive. Will any treatment shrink them?—Jeanne L.

For temporary tightening, splash on lots of cold water after cleansing your face. Pat dry and use an astringent lotion.

If the problem is really serious or bothering you very much, you might consider visiting a good dermatologist.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Read, Read, READ! You Won't Be Sorry

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am in the 6th grade, and our teacher gave us for an assignment the following: Write to a famous person and ask for one piece of advice he would give to a 6th-grader. Please don't let me down, Miss Abby, for I am counting on you. Sincerely yours,

JANICE F.

DEAR JANICE: If I could give a 6th-grader only one piece of advice, it would be: READ!

In every library can be found a wealth of knowledge and pleasure. The wisdom of the ages, the best that has been thought and felt and said, awaits you. Sample it. Read for fun, for pleasure, for information!

You can live for a little while in another century, in another country — all through books.

The man who does not read has no advantage over the man who CANNOT read.

DEAR ABBY: I have worked for a large firm for many years and it makes me cringe to see the amount of stealing that prevails under the heading of "expense accounts." Some of the expense accounters put their wives' gas tickets in with their own — Car Expense.

Some take their wives out for a birthday or anniversary celebration, along with a few other friends — "Business" entertainment.

Some buy a bottle for a friend and help him drink it — "Promotion."

The list could go on and on. These four-flushers are worse than thieves, since they are biting the hand that feeds them. I get so mad I could cry.

INFURIATED.

DEAR INFURIATED: Don't you cry. The revenuers will get them by-and-by.

DEAR ABBY: My son has four little girls, all under 10 years old, and also a little eight-month-old boy. It seems that the two-year-old child cannot pronounce "brother," so she has started calling the little boy "Bubba." Now everyone calls him "Bubba."

Abby, I have tried to point out that if this child grows up with "Bubba" tacked onto him, it will be a handicap in school, business and politics, and he will hate it.

I have seen this happen to men who would give their eye teeth if they had not been stuck with their nicknames. What are your ideas on this? I hope you agree with me and say so in your column before it's too late.

CONCERNED.

DEAR CONCERNED: Your point has some merit. But somehow people seem to survive their nicknames: "Bubba" Smith, the great Michigan State All-American end, for example. And how about "Ike" Eisenhower?

Confidential to "Should I?": No. Don't put him on the spot by asking him to tell you in so many words. When a boy stops calling a girl, he is silently conveying that it's all over. Accept it, and turn your attentions elsewhere.

How has the world been treating you? Unload your problems on Dear Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal, unpublished reply, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

LINDA CLARKE WED

Her grandmother's diamond ring fulfilled the tradition of "something old" for Linda Margaret Clarke recently when she became the bride of James Howard Taylor. The ring and a single drop pearl necklace, a gift of her mother, were the only jewelry accents to her sheath gown of faille. Her gown was styled with a bodice and sleeves of dainty lace. A detachable court train of the same lace extended back from the shoulders. The four-tier veil of tulle misted from a floral headpiece of freesia. Her bouquet of white gardenias with white streamers highlighted with pearl hearts topped her godmother's gift of a white prayer book.

EXCHANGE RINGS

Canon Grahame Baker officiated at the double-ring ceremony in St. John's Anglican Church, uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Clarke, 3467 Cardiff Place, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Taylor of Cobalt, Ont. Mr. Clarke gave his daughter in marriage.

The bride's only attendant was Miss Georgina Birnie. Her empire-line gown was fashioned of faille in pale blue shade, styled with a bodice of lace. A headpiece of blue flowers held her shoulder-length veil and she carried a nosegay of white carnations and pink roses. Her only jewelry was the bride's gift of a pearl necklace.

Miss Virginia Kidd played the accordion as the bride and groom entered the bride's parents' home for the reception. A miniature bride and groom, the same ornament that had topped her parents' wedding cake 23 years ago, highlighted the two-tier cake. White candles and freesia flanked the cake, which was made by the bride's parents. A. B. Kidd proposed the toast to the bride's happiness.

For travelling on honeymoon up-Island, the new Mrs. Taylor chose a walking suit of red Donegal tweed with a Norwegian fox collar. Complementing her ensemble was a black velvet hat, black accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

The couple will make their home in Halifax, N.S.

LOCAL IODE CHAPTER HELPS SATURNA ISLAND SCHOOL

'Fairy Godmothers' Make Children's Dream Come True

An ambitious dream of school children on Saturna Island will be realized this year, thanks to the help and encouragement of a group of Victoria 'fairy godmothers.'

In her report at the annual luncheon meeting of the Florence Nightingale Chapter IODE, held at 1365 Rockland Avenue on Monday, educational secretary Mrs. Harold Menzies told how the chapter's adopted school on the island had envisioned a trip that would see pupils making a trans-Canada tour, staying at various centres to learn more about the country, and finally visiting Expo 67 as the youngsters' centennial year project.

The chapter had donated $100 toward the project and was instrumental in staging a picture and color slide show at the island's community hall which netted $47. Visits and encouragement given by chapter members had resulted in various projects being arranged by the pupils with such effect that the trip was now financially secure.

Other educational projects had been the awarding of bursaries for $100, one to Miss Constance Ambery, a 1966 graduate of the Royal Jubilee Hospital's school of nursing, and the other to Miss Mary Lou Maceau, a second-year student at St. Joseph's Hospital's school of nursing.

The chapter's other adopted school at Fort St. John (Prespatou Valley Elementary School) had been given a library valued at $26.09, with many books and magazines sent at later dates. Gifts, valued at $95.59, had been sent at Christmas and Easter. Both the group's adopted schools had received prize books and IODE calendars.

Total spent on education work by the chapter amounted to $677.40.

Mrs. Menzies also read the publicity report of Mrs. E. Harvey, who was unable to be present.

Services at home and abroad convener, Mrs. G. C. Baker, announced that $608.68 had been spent on this facet of the group's work, with all national, provincial and municipal commitments being met.

Mrs. Baker said that she was particularly proud of the standard of work in the 114 knitted articles, seven baby gowns, baby blanket and picture book sent overseas for Korean children. Much of the knitting had been the work of Mrs. A. Richardson and Mrs. R. Gough, friends of chapter members.

An impressive total of 400 hours of voluntary services was logged by the convener, representing members' contributions to the Veterans' Hospital Red Cross Lodge, Silver Threads Centre and the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

Other projects included the donations of four hampers, $21 and bath mitts to the Retarded Children's School, the sum of $25 toward a wheel chair for multiple sclerosis victims and a Christmas hamper to a Canadian veteran and his family, who are now living overseas.

In her membership report, Mrs. William Blair totalled membership at 36 with five life members. Due to the sickness of regent Mrs. E. B. Norton, Mrs. Blair chaired the meeting in her capacity as first vice-regent and read the regent's report.

Recording secretary Mrs. W. W. Walsh announced that the 56-year-old chapter was the only local group to claim the honor of bestowing 50-year pins on two of its members during the past year. These were Mrs. J. L. Gates and Mrs. Helen Baker.

The treasurer's report of Mrs. J. R. Hamilton showed receipts of $1,356.64, disbursements amounting to $999.94 and a balance of $654.18.

Other reports were given by: Immigration and citizenship, Mrs. J. E. Neilans; Echoes, Mrs. W. C. Hudson; standard bearer, Mrs. K. Mills; flowers and cards, Mrs. G. C. Henderson; and phoning, Mrs. G. H. Swainston.

In the Valentine theme, place settings were enhanced with red-wrapped gifts, each highlighted with a white lace heart, centred with a scarlet cupid bearing the guest's name. Luncheon arrangements were by Mrs. Menzies.

Before the meeting began, guest speaker Miss Nan Dufour, an RJH graduate nurse who received the chapter's bursary in 1965, spoke on her nursing experiences in Jamaica. She was introduced by Mrs. Menzies and thanked by Mrs. Blair.

Special guests included municipal regent Miss Christine MacNab, who installed the new officers; Mrs. A. B. Hall, Nanaimo, honorary vice-regent and a provincial vice-president; Mrs. Archibald Love, supervisor of the RJH's nurses' residence, and Mrs. R. Shanks.

Mrs. Walsh is the chapter's new regent. Other officers are: First vice-regent, Mrs. Blair; second, Mrs. Swainston; secretary, Mrs. Menzies; treasurer, Mrs. Hamilton; Echoes, Mrs. Hudson; standard bearer, Mrs. Mills, and services at home and abroad, Mrs. Baker. The position of educational secretary will be filled at a later date.

DANE CREATES IN BACK-OF-GARAGE STUDIO

All He Needs Is a Piece of Wood and a Chisel

By TERRY IZZARD

Start whittling away at the bottom.

Nick Sorensen did just that at the age of 10.

Thirty-eight years later he's reached the top of the ladder.

Meeting him in the dingy upstairs room he calls "the office" doesn't give that impression.

But then neither does Nick.

But put a chisel in his hand and he does more than build houses — he builds masterpieces.

With nothing more than a few simple tools the grey-haired craftsman can transform a flat piece of wood into art.

NICK SORENSEN WITH HIS LATEST CREATION

It is only one of hundreds he has completed in the past 30 years.

On arrival in Canada 10 years ago he set up shop in Stratford, Ont.

While there, he produced many of the statues and props used by that city's famed theatre company.

One of his works, a carving of Shakespeare, now stands in the Festival Theatre grounds.

It was three years ago when he moved to Victoria and established quarters in the back of a garage.

His biggest single job to date was a relief carving of the Last Supper.

Between carvings he specializes in painting and shortly after arriving in Victoria painted 150 life-size statuettes in three months.

Curb, Gutter Projects Approved

Victoria's public works committee approved plans Tuesday for local improvement projects valued at $15,765.

All six items on the list involve new curbs and gutters.

The costs mentioned are the city's direct share of local improvements under the initiative plan. Balance of the cost is assessed against home owners in the areas involved.

Chief Commends Gritty Couples

Police Chief J. F. Gregory has praised two couples who helped capture a pair of young burglar suspects Sunday.

The arrest of the two 14-year-old boys is expected to solve a spate of recent break-ins.

Mr. and Mrs. John Urbin, 1018 Rockland, and Mr. and Mrs. Fabian Anderson of 1028 Rockland, noticed broken glass in the door of a Vancouver Street store as they were walking to the bowling alley.

Mr. Urbin saw a boy duck from view when he looked through the window of the store. While Mr. Anderson hurried away to phone police, the other three stationed themselves about the building.

UMBRELLA POINT

They bolted but Mr. Urbin managed to capture one after a lengthy chase, holding him until police arrived. The second boy was arrested later.

The pair are scheduled to face eight break-in charges involving "hundreds of dollars" when they appear in juvenile court.

Chief Gregory cited the case as "a wonderful example" of citizens co-operating with police in law enforcement.

"With the assistance of public-spirited citizens like this our crime rate could be the lowest in Canada."

At the same time the chief noted it was police policy not to release the names of people who render assistance if they object to publicity.

Grazing Land Policy in B.C. Supported in Latest Report

The B.C. Forest Service Tuesday produced a background report on its grazing permit policies involving 13 million acres of Crown land to lead off a detailed study of the situation by the legislative forestry committee.

More submissions by farm groups, wildlife organizations and forestry firms are expected to follow.

"In recent years increasing pressure is being brought to bear on the department to discontinue the grazing of domestic stock in favor of exclusive use for other purposes, mainly wildlife and recreation," the departmental paper noted.

"To accede to these demands would be serious to the livestock industry as a whole and would virtually eliminate many individual ranching operations."

Instead, the department advocated continuation of its present "integrated" program "based on the premise that land with such multiple use capability should not be managed for any single resource interest such as the recreationist, the lumberman or the stockman to the exclusion of other resources users."

The department pointed out that much of the area providing natural forage also has timber stands.

Last year the department issued 2,244 grazing permits for pasturing 189,286 cattle, 6,572 horses and 8,970 sheep.

EMPRESS MANUFACTURING PLANT

Burnaby, B.C.

Modern and efficient to the last detail. This spacious beautifully designed plant is the combination of over 60 years of successful jam making during which Empress products have outsold all others in Canada from the Pacific Ocean to the head of the Great Lakes.

EMPRESS are the original users of the vacuum method of processing jams, jellies and marmalades in Western Canada. There is still no better method known to process these products. Vacuum cooking, or as we call it "Cool Cook," requires only 107° F. under vacuum to finish the product. The conventional open kettle requires 222° F. to do the same job. There are numerous advantages for the "Cool Cook," such as more flavor, better color, finer texture and a more economical operation. When a better technique is developed for even finer quality and economy, we guarantee Empress will be first.

Part of our success over the years is our close relationship with the farmers. We work hand in hand with them to maintain a smooth flow of the highest possible quality fruit to our plant. This partnership assists the grower to attain a higher economic unit and a good income for his efforts and investment.

EMPRESS peanut butter is produced by the most modern "Cold Pack" process. Long cooling periods rob peanut butter of flavor and darken the color. Our process, rapid chills the peanut butter to retain the natural flavor and color of the peanuts. In addition, it is double milled to produce the ultimate in a smooth, creamy texture. Try it once—you'll be convinced.

We are, for all practical purposes, the only sizable exporter of Jam, Jellies and Marmalade in Canada. We distribute to warehouses in all the Western States of the U.S.A. From these warehouses, there is flow of product to most of the remaining states. Exports mean dollars coming to Canada for bigger and better payrolls.

Rustler to Hustle Around Harbor Soon

Last of Island Tug and Barge Ltd.'s small craft expansion program, the powerful 47-foot Island Rustler, will be added to the fleet at month-end.

Bearing the identity of its namesake, which for many years carried Island Tug colors in local waters, the vessel was christened last week by Mrs. Dave Hood, wift of Island Tug's Victoria Harbor dispatcher.

The tug was launched at B.C. Marine shipbuilders in Vancouver as part of ITB's $4 million replacement and expansion program started last year.

Still to come are two large 1,200-horspower "twins" of a more powefrul class designed for coastal towing, now under construction at McKay-Cormack shipyard, Victoria.

Rustler was designed by Vancouver marine architect Robert Allan, primarily to assist ocean-going vessels to and from berths in Victoria harbor. But it also will see considerable service in log-towing and local scow yarding.

Special features of the vessel include a steering Kort nozzle, which together with the 465-horsepower diesel will make the tug able to manoeuvre in close quarters with ease.

66-INCH SCREW

There are AM and VHF radio telephones, echo sounder and radar equipment, and the ship has engine room and steering controls in wheelhouse, on flying bridge and at an after station.

Although primarily a day boat, Rustler has limited accommodation in its fo'c'sle compartment.

Ladysmith Won't Extend Garbage Collection Runs

LADYSMITH — Town council has turned down a Chemainus Indian band request to extend garbage collection service to include reserves at Chemainus Bay and Shell Beach.

Mayor Kay Grouhel said the town's garbage service is fully taxed at present and could not economically undertake collections entailing round trips of 16 miles and more.

The band council had asked for an estimate of cost.

Pensioners Must Answer Questions

OTTAWA (CP)—The government Monday unveiled a simple, 11-part questionnaire to be filled out by applicants for the federal old age pension supplement.

Forms along with a green-and-brown pamphlet explaining how to fill them out and how the pension supplement works will be mailed to Canadians receiving the standard $75 - a-month old age pension.

Both forms and pamphlet are printed in English and French.

The booklet said prompt return of the filled-out form will give some pensioners additional income with their old age security cheques in March. The extra will be included in the regular pension cheque.

RETROACTIVE

The first supplemental cheques will also contain supplements for January and February since it is retroactive to the first of the year.

Under the plan, pensioners are guaranteed a monthly income of $105, the government supplying up to $30 for those pensioners below that level.

The explanatory pamphlet said that a single person with an income of less than $720 a year not counting his old age pension is eligible to apply.

A married couple, both drawing old-age pension cheques, would be eligible if their combined income was less than $2,340, not counting the pension cheque.

Eligible pensioners will receive anywhere from $1 to $30 extra depending on their income. A yearly income of less than $24 will result in the maximum $30 a month addition.

The questions on the one-page application form relate either to income or simple personal details such as age or social security number.

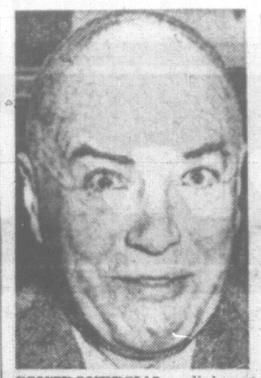

LIST INCOME

Applicants will have to list property rents, dividends, business profits and professional fees, for example. A variety of government pensions including old age security are not counted as income and need not be listed.

Nor will unemployment insurance benefits, gifts from relatives or organizations, money from sale of investments or possessions. Listed income will be checked with the tax divisions of the revenue department.

Stanley Knowles, NDP member for Winnipeg North Centre, said Monday in the Commons that the application form says war veterans' allowances are not counted as income.

But the veterans affairs department has told veterans they cannot receive both the war veterans allowance and the supplementary pension. Prime Minister Pearson said he would investigate.

CONTROVERSIAL diplomat William C. Bullitt, who served as first U.S. ambassador to the Soviet Union, died of leukemia in Paris today at the age of 76. He has been in the news as co-author with Sigmund Freud of a recently-published book on the life of Woodrow Wilson.

CREE YOUTH LEADER OUTLINES COMPLAINTS

Agents 'Interfere, Not Help'

"Canada's problem's are not Indian or French-Canadian, but English-Canadian problems," said Harold Cardinal, of High Prairie, Alta., president of the 2,000 member Canadian Indian Youth Council.

Beginning a tour of Canada here Tuesday, Mr. Cardinal said government and government agents intervene in Indian problems rather than trying to interpret them.

"And intervention is always condescension."

Mr. Cardinal said "Canada's Indian don't need motivation."

"First of all services are available to white communities that aren't available to Indian communities."

Another grievance is that "especially in B.C." the Indian Affairs Department wants Indians to "assimilate — lose their identity — not integrate."

He also pointed out among all of Canada's 250,000 Indians, only 150 were registered at universities.

A student at the University of Ottawa, he said the first step to any solution for Indians entails the "removal" of the Indians Affairs branch system as it is.

He says another government agency, the Company of Young Canadians, not much older than his own organization formed a year ago, won't "meet the needs" of Indians.

His Youth Council has formed a task force, not he says to "instigate protest marches," but to inform Indians of their rights.

Mr. Cardinal who will be accompanied on his tour by 22-year-old David Isaac, from Fort St. James (a Carrier Indian who is vice-president of the western region of the council) says the council is "politically non-partisan."

Asked if he agreed with the NDP legislative member for Atlin, Frank Calder, himself an Indian, that Indian reserves ought to be phased out of existence, Mr. Cardinal said: "No — city slums are already overloaded."

Prizefighter Jailed

MONTREAL (CP) — Aime Deom, 43, a former prizefighter who fought under the name of Kid Gerard in many of Canada's biggest arenas, was sentenced Tuesday to three years' imprisonment for attempted extortion by torture. Deom pleaded guilty to attempting to extort from two men about $400 and a false admission that they had burgled a restaurant owned by a friend of Deom's.

10 Vehicles in 4 Crashes At Bridge; $5,300 Damage

LADYSMITH—At 6 p.m. Tuesday Verne Hougen slowed down in preparation for turning off the Trans-Canada Highway.

At 6:40 p.m. police were still trying to untangle the wreckage of a 10-vehicle pile-up.

In the space of 40 minutes and 100 yards the notorious Diamond Bridge just north of here had taken a toll of six cars, three trucks and a bus.

Miraculously no-one was hurt.

As near as police can reconstruct events it happened like this:

Mr. Hougen was heading south on the Trans-Canada Highway. As he prepared to turn into the Star Drive-In he was hit from behind.

This car was in turn hit by a northbound car.

A truck driver, seeing the first crash, slowed down and was rear-ended by a pickup truck. This was 40 yards north of the accident scene.

Two minutes later a bus going south braked to avoid the tangle. A following four-ton truck also braked and skidded hitting another vehicle.

Ladysmith RCMP constable William Armstrong, who was already on the scene, decided things were getting slightly too hectic for him to handle alone and Constable Lance Bailey of Nanaimo arrived to help out.

Just as things appeared to be sorting themselves out, the fourth crash came — slap bang in the same spot as the third.

"The bus and truck had only just been removed," said Constable Armstrong. "We thought we'd finally got things cleaned up."

But not so.

One car braked on seeing the wreckage. A following car also braked. Then a third car banged into the second car which bumped into the first car which . . .

Total damage was estimated at $5,300.

Drivers of the 10 vehicles were:

Police said three people had been charged. They will appear in court next Tuesday.

All Students On Saturna Going to Expo

SATURNA ISLAND — The entire school-age population here will take off for Expo 67 this summer.

The go-ahead was given this week by Gulf Islands school board.

The trip, which has been endorsed as the island's centennial project, was held up earlier while the school board checked into its legal position.

No departure date has been set.

125 More Homes for Firemen

LADYSMITH—Starting March 1, Ladysmith Fire Department will give protection to the 125 homes in the Diamond district.

Ladysmith council made the decision Monday after Diamond ratepayers confirmed acceptance of a three-mill levy to meet the cost.

Diamond ratepayers approached the council last year when it became clear their own volunteer department could not count on sufficient men being available to fight daytime fires.

Mayor Kay Grouhel said: "The new (unorganized) area is quite compact and does not add much mileage to the district already covered by our department."

Log Storage Protested By Residents

CAMPBELL RIVER — Residents of Gowlland Harbor, Quadra Island, are fighting a plan to store logs on 108 water acres in the harbor.

They met here to protest a proposal by Elk Falls Company. The firm has filed applications for log storage leases for area surrounding Stag and Doe Islands in the harbor, both recently purchased by the company.

H. C. Hall, Elk Falls mill manager, said a refusal of the desired log storage space would seriously threaten the company's operations of supplying logs for the Crown Zellerbach pulp and paper complex near Campbell River.

He said Gowlland Harbor is the only site available with suitable tide and wind conditions for log booming.

LONG USED

The harbor has been used for log storage for 50 years, and boating, fishing and water-skiing would still be possible in the area if the leases were granted, he said.

The Elk Falls Company will eventually require an additional 183 acres of log storage space, Mr. Hall said.

LONG HOURS PROTESTED

Trustees to Study Buses, Supervision

GANGES—A special school board committee will be set up to study school bus schedules and supervision of children before and after school.

The committee was decided on following receipt of a 32-name petition from Fulford parents protesting present bus schedules.

They asked that an extra bus be used or that the schedule be amended to permit children to leave home later and return earlier.

Fulford children have to travel the seven miles to Ganges every day.

Robert Patterson, chairman of the school board's transportation committee, said he did not believe the children suffer academically or physically from the long hours.

Mr. Hartwig said children are supervised, but this presents problems for teachers who come early or stay late to check and prepare work.

In reviewing the transportation problem, the board is trying to avoid a cost of $15,000 to provide a fourth bus and driver.

PLANNED FOR WEIGHT

Far Eastern Tour

OTTAWA (CP)—A delegation of businessmen and members of Parliament leaves next week for a three-week fact-finding trip to the Far East. Robert Thompson, national leader of the Social Credit party, will lead the group on a trip that is privately financed.

City Library First To Have Apprentices

By ELIZABETH FORBES

When city librarian Jack Lort spoke to the Victoria Branch of the B.C. Historical Society, he mentioned with quiet pride that Victoria Public Library was amongst the first to institute student-apprentice courses in this city.

Forbes

Yesterday, when I went down to his office to question him further about this he took out an old minute book, quickly turned its pages and pointed to the substantiating facts.

It was in May, 1912, that Miss Helen Stewart (now Dr. Stewart and living in retirement in this city) was appointed acting librarian "at a recommended salary of $100 a month". (This was increased by $10 a short time later when she was confirmed in the position.)

Immediately she became oriented, Miss Stewart recognized the need for more—and continuing—staff. And her first move was to place before the board in November that same year, a suggestion that student-apprentice courses be organized.

The idea was accepted early in 1913 and Miss Stewart and Dr. W. L. Clay (a member of the library board) were authorized to prepare a student calendar.

Miss Clara van Sant, daughter of the last general manager of the now long defunct Victoria and Sidney Railway (then with a city station and freight sheds on Blanshard near Herald Street), had been working in the library for several months and she was accepted as the first student-apprentice.

The second was Miss Doris Holmes (who later left library work for interior decorating) and then Miss Madge Wolfenden (now Mrs. James H. Hamilton) and Miss Margaret Clay, daughter of the library board member.

Work was arranged over a full year with the young apprentices learning about cataloguing, reference work and the needs in children's as well as adult reading.

No remuneration was offered for the first two months. After that, and until the end of the course, these young women received $10 a month.

A passing standard was set by the board and at the end of the course students answered a set of questions. If satisfactory they were given a certificate (originally designed by Dr. Clay) that said they were now ready for library staff work.

Miss van Sant, with 70 per cent in library economy and 75 per cent in literature and general information, was the first to receive her certificate and immediately was engaged as assistant librarian at the princely salary of $60 a month.

In turn, Miss Holmes was named to the regular staff at $45 a month, when she graduated.

Miss Clay was temporarily placed in charge of the children's department (when Miss Pat Steniberger left) until she went off to library school in Pittsburgh. She returned to the staff at completion of her studies and in 1924 was named the city librarian.

When she completed her course Miss Wolfenden went to the cataloguing department of the provincial library and when the position of assistant librarian and archivist was divided became assistant archivist.

Student-apprentice courses were maintained in this manner at Victoria Public Library for more than 30 years.

In 1915, when "because of severe financial depression" it was decided to pay no salary at all "for the present," Miss Marjorie Holmes (later to be on the provincial library staff) was accepted with the understanding that she would be "allowed leave to do teacher substituting when she wished".

In 1917 when the course was reduced to six months and emphasis placed on the practical side of library work only, the first male student became an apprentice "in accordance with the rules".

He was J. D. Leechman, a returned soldier—today a well-known author and anthropologist.

In recent years Mr. Lort told me, an effort was made to revive student classes in the library, without the apprentice angle. Groups of six to 10 young people were given instruction in a series of four-week half-day courses.

"But we found that while these students wanted to do library work it was in universities and colleges that they were most interested. Very few gave thought to entering public libraries."

So, in the past two or three years, the idea has been dropped and the courses have not been active.

PEOPLE RAN FROM SCENE OF ACCIDENT

DORION, Que. (CP) — A Board of Transport Commissioner's inquiry was told Tuesday pedestrians and car drivers scattered immediately after a westbound freight train hit a chartered bus at a level crossing Oct. 7, causing 20 deaths.

Armand de la Boursodiere, who was in his car behind the bus on the south side of the crossing, said he found it "odd that people should be running from the scene of the accident."

"They didn't want to do their duty as citizens," he said.

Military Code For Viet Newsmen

SAIGON (AP)—U.S. officials announced today that civilians, including newspaper men, "serving with or accompanying" U.S. forces in South Vietnam come under the code of military justice.

Some newspaper men argued at length over the statement that Vietnam "is not in a formal state of war but in a time of war" and that military police can "apprehend and detain" any U.S. citizen in South Vietnam.

One issue is whether U.S. civilians in South Vietnam on private business are under U.S. military or South Vietnamese control at all times even when not accompanying American forces in the field.

Haughney said "in the field applies to all of South Vietnam" for the purposes of the ruling.

There have been frequent clashes—usually verbal — between newspaper men covering events in Saigon and military policemen.

Lewis drew an angry response from British and French newspaper men when he said that U.S. jurisdiction "technically could be applied to third-country nationals."

Telephone Call Leads to Arrest Of Murder Suspect

RED DEER (CP)—An anonymous telephone call early today led to the arrest of a 25-year-old Red Deer man in the weekend strangling of 12-year-old Judy Marlene Hudkins of Red Deer.

Robert Harold Kniess, an attendant at a provincial home for retarded persons, appeared before Magistrate J. H. McKenzie and was remanded in Calgary provincial jail to Feb. 22.

The girl's body was found Sunday morning in a field outside Red Deer, about 10 hours after she disappeared.

Police said he has two children.

Board Budget To Be Temporary

The Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health will operate on a provisional budget this year until the Regional District takes over responsibility.

The main stumbling block in making the operation of the board a regional function is the working out of a cost-sharing formula by the provincial government.

Chairman Reeve Gordon Lee said Tuesday that it could be some time before the government finds the equitable formula municipalities are demanding.

Victoria, Oak Bay and Esquimalt pulled out of the metro set-up technically at the end of last year in protest at the $2-$3 per capita they were paying for a service which cost rural areas, including Saanich, only 30-40 cents per capita.

Reeve Lee said that while the three discontented municipalities could refuse financial support at present, it was unlikely that they would.

It was agreed that a provisional budget should be drawn up during the next month and used until the new cost-sharing formula is found.

B.C. Government Becoming 'Confederation Cry-Babies'

By GLEN ALLEN

Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound), referring to complaints by the government of inequitable treatment by Ottawa, laid the blame on the province's doorstep. He said the truth is the government "cannot be entrusted with the responsibility of negotiating side by side with the other provinces of Canada."

Mr. Williams cited cases of substantial grants to five other provinces where "the federal government was a political opponent."

WILLIAMS
. . . not negotiators

'DON'T PLAY FAIR'

"Can it be that the premier and his group can't bargain with equals?"

He said the government does province that the 'big boys' in "not have the right to come the rest of the province don't crying home to the voters of the play fair."

The Liberal member said the British North America Act ought to be re-christened "Bennett's New Approach" in Ottawa.

He charged B.C.'s failure at the negotiating table was used as an excuse to make "scurrilous attacks upon our country.

"The knife has been firmly placed in the back of Confederation and twisted under the guise of discussion, examination and consideration."

Mr. Williams said the public in B.C. cannot "escape the conclusion that he is paying an ever-increasing amount in taxes."

The provincial government is not bearing "a share in this increasing cost in proportion to the rate of increase."

He said the homeowner's grant "ignores the ever-increasing number of our people who are tenants."

On another front, Mr. Williams demanded to know who would be the president of the Bank of British Columbia.

"Would his initials be E.G.?" Dr. Pat McGeer (L—Point Grey) called out.

Mr. Williams wanted to know "how independent and how western-oriented the bank will be."

U.S.-RUSSIA RATIFY NEW FISH AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The United States and the Soviet Union announced an agreement Tuesday giving Russian fishermen, in some instances, access to waters within 12 miles of the U.S. coastline.

The treaty, signed Monday at the state department, allows the Russians to fish in prescribed areas within the 12-mile zone in the Gulf of Alaska and the Aleutian Islands.

The Russian were also given permission to conduct loading operations, but not fishing rights, in prescribed zones in Oregon, Washington and Alaska.

Alarm Men Charged

NEW YORK (UPI)—Six employees of a burglar alarm protection company were arrested Tuesday and charged with burglarizing their customers of at least $300,000.

CANDIDATE for Mississippi lieutenant - governor in elections next fall will be Byron Beckwith who was twice brought to trial for the 1963 sniper slaying of Negro leader Medgar Evers. Both trials ended with hung juries. He has been free ever since and the state has given no indication it intends to try the case again.

VANCOUVER AT TURNING POINT—KEATE

'Cinderella City' Left Far Behind by Victoria

The publisher of the Vancouver Sun said here Tuesday his native city has been outstripped by Victoria in per capita civic development.

J. Stuart Keate, speaking to a formal gathering of Victoria Chamber of Commerce in honor of 18 past presidents, said Vancouver is at the turning point.

"I agree with Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) — Vancouver is the Cinderella city. But the clock is approaching twelve.

"Either she goes on to live a charmed life, or she reverts to a scullery maid," Mr. Keate said.

MANY NEEDS

He pointed out that Vancouver needs a new city hall, downtown redevelopment and a new city centre, new YM and YWCAs and an addition to the court house.

Victoria has all of these, he said.

"On the basis of per capita development of civic amenities, there's no doubt in my nind that Victoria has left Vancouver far behind.

"This hasn't been done in any flashy, flamboyant way, but through the steady, sensible, quiet planning and development of a lot of dedicated citizens.

"On the face of it, you have to assign top marks to the municipal authorities, and particularly the respective councils.

"In Victoria, unlike Vancouver, you seem to have a body of men who are willing to co-operate, to work together, to support their mayor and to bury their differences in the broader interests of the whole city," the publisher said.

An active Chamber of Commerce, "needling, pushing, persuading and prodding" has also been effective, he said.

An ex-chamber president himself, Mr. Keate was publisher of the Times for 14 years until his appointment to the Sun in his native city.

CALL GROUNDS FLIGHTS

VANCOUVER (CP) — More than 500 passengers cooled their heels at Vancouver International Airport Tuesday as a crank call tied up 11 flights for two hours. Michael James McDonald, 19, later pleaded guilty in Richmond of making a bomb scare telephone call to airport officials and was remanded to February 28 for sentencing.

'Picasso After Guernica'

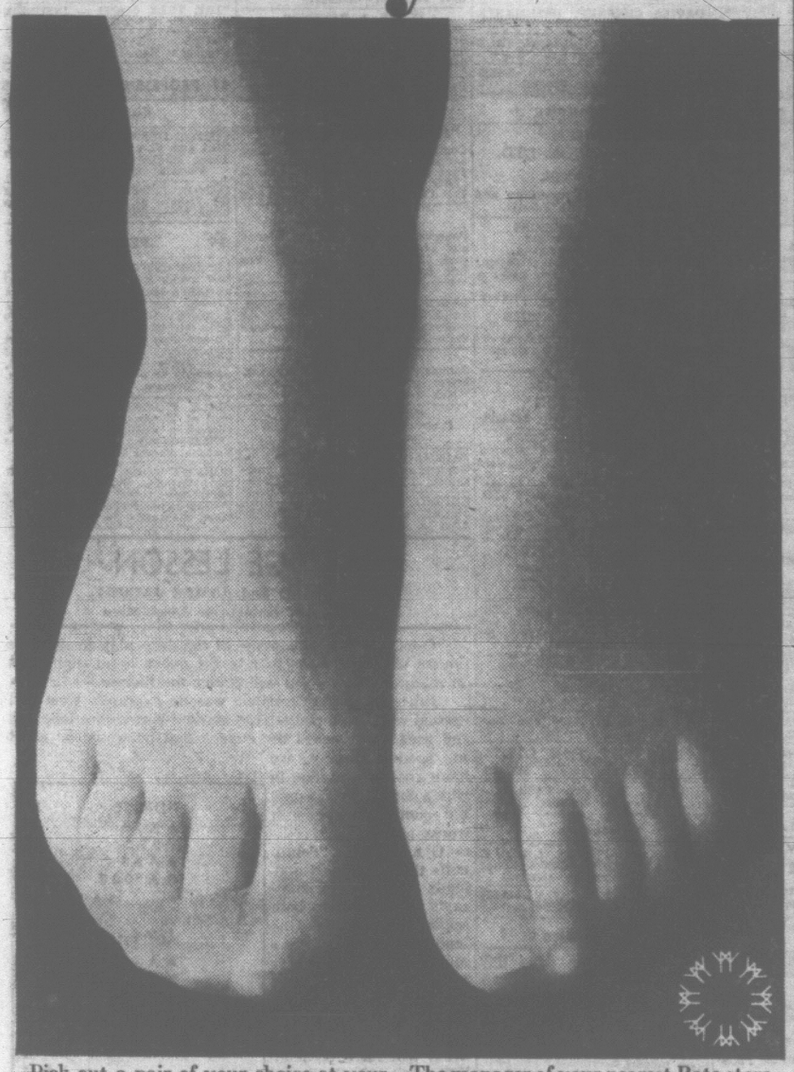

The National Gallery's new director, Dr. Jean Sutherland Boggs, will speak at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria Monday at 8:30 p.m.

Her topic will be "Picasso After Guernica."

Prior to accepting her new position Dr. Boggs was curator of the Art Gallery of Toronto, and in that capacity was mainly responsible for organizing a huge and now famous exhibition "Picasso and Man."

Her Monday lecture, which will be illustrated, will deal with developments in Picasso's style during the three decades since he created his famous mural painting "Guernica," perhaps the best-known of all 20th Century paintings. The lecture will be open to the public.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

Dont't ask me how Maurice Chevalier does it. He's been singing songs from the time the first note was put on paper it seems. And each time he comes out the songs take on new life from the seventy-some-odd-year-old performer.

Stephen

Chevalier teamed with Diahann Carroll in the first color television special from Paris via "ABC Stage '67" via CBC-TV's Show of the Week series.

The hour-long musical still has to play to the American audience via ABC but if they have any feelings at all they'll also be receptive to the display of songs and Paris.

The long-time international entertainer gave life to Give My Regards To Broadway and stirred memories with his own special treatment of the song that will always bring him to mind when sung or played, Louise.

And that Diahann Carroll is something else again.

The attractive dusky vocalist showed a great deal of class whether belting out Some of These Days or purring Yesterday.

The credit for the hour must go to French director Jean-Christophe Averty for the imagination wielded through the eye of the camera. The overall producers of Stage '67 must also get the big nod.

There was a great deal of headshaking and soul searching when the series was first concocted. Some of the earlier attempts were dismal but showed promise because the network was carrying out an experiment for better TV fare .

"C'est la Vie," the tour of Paris with the team of Chevalier and Carroll like last week's "The Light Fantastic," with Lauren Bacall and John Forsythe, was original and digestible.

The simple fact the network tis trying something new earns another season for Stage '67.

TIDBITS: CBS-TV'S What's My Line, which has been on the air since February, 1950, is to get the axe at the end of the season. The panel show hosted by John Daly will probably be replaced by a western.

The on-again off-again antics of Peter Reilly are on-again. He started the season with CTV's W5 but huffed off for some reason or other. He then took up with CBC-TV's Sunday only to stalk off two weeks ago because he wasn't allowed to interview neo-Naxi Adolph Van Thadden. Now he's back to work with the public corporation until his $400 per week contract runs out.

U.K., MALTA DISPUTE BLOCKS QUEEN'S VISIT

LONDON (AP)—The Queen has called off an official visit to Malta in the face of bitterness against Britain's plans to cut forces based on the Mediterranean island, it was learned early today.

Court sources said arrangements for the Queen and Prince Philip to visit Malta in May were shelved at the initiative of the Maltese government.

It was believed to be the first time that a political dispute within the Commonwealth has forced the Queen to abandon an official visit to a member country.

LATINS SIGN N-WEAPON BAN

MEXICO CITY (AP)—Fourteen Latin American governments signed the Treaty of Tlatelolco Tuesday night to ban nuclear weapons from a vast territory south of the United States.

But before the first treaty banning nuclear weapons from a populated area is binding, it must be ratified by all governments controlling territory in the zone and guaranteed by the five nuclear powers.

U.S. Lobbying Threatens To Disrupt OAS Meeting

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Intense lobbying by the United States today threatened to disrupt one of the most important ministerial meetings in the history of the Organization of American States.

Foreign ministers from the U.S. and 19 Latin American nations met today to deal with two major tasks: "Revitalizing the 19-year-old OAS charter and to agree on the place, date and agenda of a proposed Western Hemisphere summit conference.

U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk arrived here Tuesday and was reported to be leading a high - powered, behind - the-lens drive to bring about firm agreement on holding the summit meeting with Latin American integration as the major theme.

Some Latin American diplomats said the U.S. pressure might result in as many as five nations boycotting the summit because they disapprove of the agenda.

Chile, Colombia, Venezuela, Peru and Costa Rica were named as being especially bitter over the U.S. seizing the initiative in making proposals for what they felt would be a mainly Latin American event.

They feared the president would attempt to use a summit meeting to establish an image comparable to that of the late President Kennedy gained in 1962 by initiating the massive U.S. Alliance for Progress aid plan.

Latin Americans noted repeated statements made by Johnson that the chiefs of state would meet in April, although the present conference was supposed to decide a time and place.

It was, however, generally expected that the meeting will be held in April, at Punta del Este, Uruguay.

Fired as an Example Admiral Tells Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — Rear-Admiral Jeffry Brock suggested Tuesday he was fired by Defence Minister Hellyer in August, 1964, as an example to other officers who might question the minister's policy.

He told the Commons defence committee during a five-hour grilling that "beyond a shadow of a doubt" his firing inhibited other officers from giving Mr. Hellyer frank advice.

Admiral Brock was flag officer Atlantic Coast when he was sacked four years before his normal retirement age of 55.

The only reason given him by Mr. Hellyer was that armed forces personnel were going to be cut from top to bottom and "you are at the top."

He said he was astounded at his firing because only a few days earlier then associate defence minister Cardin, now justice minister, had applauded his plans to advance integration in Maritime Command.

He said Mr. Cardin had suggested during a meeting in Halifax that he write out his plans for presentation to Mr. Hellyer.

When he was summoned to Ottawa Aug. 5, 1964, he had expected to be asked for his plans.

Instead, he had been summarily fired.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) asked whether the admiral thought his firing was connected with his off-record views expressed in reply to questions by the committee during its visit to Halifax five days earlier.

OFTEN WONDERED

Admiral Brock said he did not see any connection at that time. But in light of subsequent events "I have often wondered."

He said between 30 and 40 senior officers have been fired, retired "or otherwise disposed of." Some had been promoted to replace other officers and then been replaced themselves.

It was hard to come to any other conclusion than that officers won promotion by backing the integration and unification program.

'CRACKPOTS'

He quickly added that this was no reflection on the officers concerned but on the system which "arranged" such promotions.

Admiral Brock said unification had been advocated "by crackpots in other countries" but nobody had paid any attention to them.

"Balderdash," he said.

HIGH RISES STRUCK BY PLANE; TWO DIE

CHICAGO (AP)—A single-engined airplane slammed into two high rise apartment buildings in dense fog today and two men aboard the plane were killed.

They were identified by police as Clarence Elliott, 28, of Kiel, Wis., the pilot, and Charles Brickner, 38, of Sheboygan Falls, Wis.

None of the apartment dwellers, pedestrians or workbound motorists on heavily travelled Sheridan Road was injured.

Damage to the apartment buildings, the 29-storey Hollywood Towers and the Horizon House, a 30-storey structure, was minor.

WIRE BRIEFS

Leary Nabbed Again

DETROIT (AP)—Dr. Timothy Leary, high priest of the League of Spiritual Development, was arrested Tuesday and charged with failing to register as a convicted narcotics user. The one-time Harvard University professor was charged by customs officials who said Leary attempted to enter Canada Monday and returned to the United States without the registration.

Ceremony at Vimy

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will take 70 Vimy Ridge survivors to France in April for ceremonies marking the 50th anniversary of that First World War battle, Veterans Minister Teillet announced Tuesday. Another 70 will be brought to Ottawa for a ceremony here and a Vimy Night dinner on Parliament Hill.

Customs Men Face Charges Of Smuggling

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal officials said Tuesday that 23 customs officers employed at Prescott and Ivy Lea border checkpoints in Ontario will be indefinitely suspended for smuggling goods into Canada from the U.S.

One immigration officer has retired, another has resigned and two more will suffer disciplinary action as a result of a lengthy investigation.

J. G. Howell, assistant deputy minister in the revenue department, said court action will not be taken because the goods were smuggled for personal rather than commercial use.

He indicated that the 23 suspensions amount to dismissal unless they can appeal successfully.

Mr. Howell said liquor was among the items illegally imported. Most of the offences took place in 1966 and involved small items.

OPEN ALL YEAR

Under suspension will be 12 customs officers at Lansdowne and 11 at Prescott, both St. Lawrence ports of entry that are open 24 hours daily all year. Each has a customs staff of about 35.

He indicated that less severe sanctions are being taken against other customs employees found to be involved.

An immigration department spokesman said the crackdown results from an investigation started last summer by the RCMP and the customs inspection service after reports of irregularities.

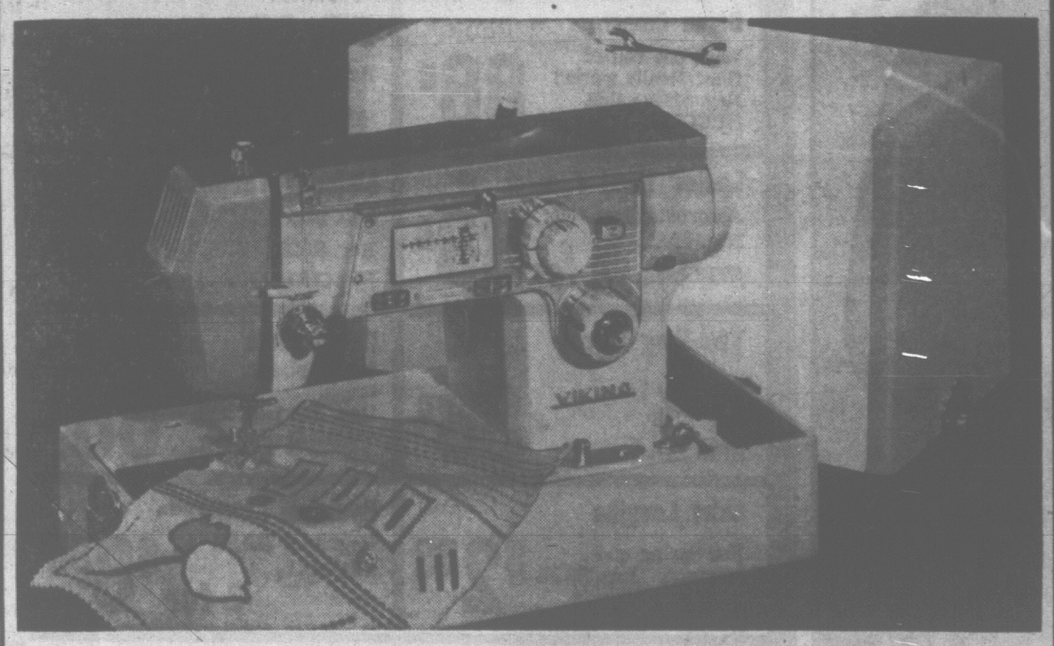

Mr. Howell said no criminal offence is involved.

Prescott is about 25 miles east of Brockville and Lansdowne about 30 miles east of Kingston.

LEAGUE GETS LITTLE SYMPATHY FROM BOARD

'People Are More Important Than Cats!'

The needs of living people are more important than the disposition of dead cats, says Coun. Art Mebs.

The Esquimalt representative on the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health made the statement Tuesday afternoon after board members had listened to an appeal from the Cats' Protection League for improved conditions at municipal garbage dumps, the last resting place for many household pets.

"If people are so terribly concerned about their dead cats, why don't they bury them in their own backyard?" said Coun. Mebs. "There are more pressing things than to burden ourselves with this sort of thing. Any money we have could be put to better use."

Victoria representative Ald. Lily Wilson asked if any move had been made by the cat lovers to build a crematorium where pets could be disposed of for a fee.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, said consideration had been given to building a pet crematorium but the cost of $20,000 had been found too high.

He said that facilities now existed at the Hartland Road garbage dump for people to have their pets buried in a special plot of land for a nominal fee.

On the Protection League's accusation that seagulls were being shot on municipal dumps, Dr. Whitbread said the charge was true.

"Between September and December 180 gulls were shot on the dumps," he said. "As a result we have very few seagulls inhabiting the dumps these days."

Dr. Whitbread said special dispensation had been received from the provincial authorities to shoot the normally protected gulls.

"It's all been done quite legally," he said.

While on the subject, Ald. Wilson wondered if any municipalities had any bylaws governing the number of pets householders could keep.

None had, but Coun. Edith Gunning of Saanich said her municipality hoped to have such a law shortly.

"We should be introducing a new animal bylaw shortly which will restrict the number of cats and dogs a household can have," she said.

Coun. Gunning couldn't give a specific date when the new law would be introduced but indicated it would be within the next week or two.

$100 Million Mistake On Jails?

OTTAWA (CP)— The government is "on the verge of a $100,000,000 mistake" if it goes ahead with the present design for five maximum security prisons, a joint parliamentary committee was told Monday.

One of the five prisons now is under construction at Ste. Anne des Plaines, Que., but construction of the other four—all identical — has been put off while criticisms are heard.

Toronto architect Harry B. Kohl told the committee that the St. Anne des Plaines design is "worse than Kingston," an aging Ontario fortress among those to be replaced by the new prisons.

Of the four maximum security prisons held up by design criticism one was planned for Millhaven, Ont., near Kingston, and one for an undisclosed location in B.C. The other two locations have not been announced.

Plans to build the prisons at an estimated cost of $18,000,000 each first were disclosed in the Commons Nov. 23, 1964, by then justice minister Favreau.

Mr. Kohl, a consultant to the federally - appointed Canadian committee on corrections, was among a group of witnesses from the Canadian Corrections Association to urge that the whole maximum security program be reconsidered.

He said if the prisons are built, they will become "steel and concrete straitjackets."

Sidney Mayor Backs Bid On City Water Extension

Mayor A. W. Freeman of Sidney told council Monday night he favors the extension of the Greater Victoria water system to the northern part of Saanich Peninsula.

He also said Elk Lake should be developed as a recreational area but not at the expense of Peninsula residents.

Reading from a prepared statement, the mayor said: "We in Sidney are concerned and cognizant of the problems involving the domestic water supply to the northern Saanich Peninsula and the situation is deteriorating annually.

"We have been advised that the water table in this area is decreasing annually and this, plus the fact that the demand for water is increasing daily, indicates that the final solution must be the extension of the Greater Victoria water system."

Concerning Elk Lake, he said: "In Elk Lake, Saanich has an ideal recreational area and I feel that this should be developed as such, but not at the expense of the residents of the Saanich Peninsula."

He said Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, indicated restrictions should be placed on recreation at the lake because of its direct association with the domestic water supply.

"PRIORITY BASIS"

"The authority of the metropolitan board of health should be exercised and the municipalities concerned should press for extension of the Greater Victoria water system. The health and growth of a community is contingent on a sufficient and clean domestic water supply and it is our duty to consider this matter on a priority basis."

Two weeks ago, North Saanich council received a letter from Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis clarifying his earlier comments on the subject of the water supply and recreational use of Elk Lake.

Reeve Curtis wrote: "I did question . . . whether it was necessary to prohibit all forms of recreational activity in proximity to the (water) outlet (on Elk Lake). A further report on this question from Dr. Whitbread may well prove that such restriction is indeed necessary."

BOTH USERS

Reeve Curtis' letter went on to state that perhaps the two uses—recreation and water supply—could be easily accommodated in a lake the size of Elk without detriment. He also commented in favor of the extension of the Greater Victoria Water District system.

Reeve J. B. Cumming of North Saanich agreed with Reeve Curtis' views. Reeve Cumming told North Saanich council the entire lake should be used for recreational pusposes but the pipeline to carry Greater Victoria water northward should be built first.

North Saanich council then agreed to acknowledge Reeve Curtis' letter and to express gratitude for his views on the extension of the water pipeline.

Cabbage Family Rich in Vitamins

By JACK BEASTALL

The various members of the cabbage family are rich in vitamins and minerals, therefore should be included in all home vegetable gardens.

Jack

Losses of these vital health promoters are rapid, around 10 per cent within an hour of gathering and 50 per cent after eight hours.

These figures show that cabbage has little food value unless used absolutely fresh from the garden. Besides all the types of greens which are included in this group, there are distinct kinds of cabbage for each season of the year.

Summer cabbage, useable in July and August, must have the seed sown in March and plants set out in the garden about four weeks later, or in April.

Fall cabbage seed is sown in April, the plants set out in May, and the crop used from August to October.

In May, the seed of winter cabbage is sown to have plants ready to set out in June for use from November to March.

Spring cabbage is a term that confuses many gardeners. The see of this is sown a pinch at a time at two week intervals from mid-July to mid-August, using the variety Flower-of-Spring.

The plants are set out as vacancies are found in fall. During April of the following year they will provide loose leaf cabbage, improving to solid heads by May into June.

Careful timing will provide a steady supply over the entire year, in addition to other members of the family, broccoli, sprouts, and kale.

CENTENNIAL SCHOLARSHIPS

Two $500 scholarships to be awarded political science or economics students at University of Victoria were announced Tuesday.

Ford dealer Peter Pollen, who established the scholarships said they will commemorate the centenary of Confederation. Both undergraduate and post-graduate students may compete for the awards which will be made by the senate committee on scholarships. Deadline for applications is April 30.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 62-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Gigi Norton, age 10, of San Bernardino, California, for her question:

What is a trap-door spider?

Perhaps there is a trap door in the ceiling of your home leading to the roof or the attic. The handy gadget is a flat hole leading from one level to the next and covered with a neatly fitted hinged door. The idea was invented by certain spiders millions of years before people made houses.

About 30,000 different spiders have been listed and all of them can spin gossamer threads of silk. All of them dine on bugs and beetles and help to keep down the pesky insect population. The big wolf spider chases his victims on long, hairy legs. Many others also are hunters. And many spiders are expert trappers. The cobweb in the attic and the gauzy round web in the garden are spider snares for trapping insects. Perhaps the most amazing trapper of them all is the trap-door spider.

These spiders live in many parts of the country but we are most likely to find one in the Southwest. Look for this hungry housewife on the ground outdoors in a place where bugs and beetles scuttle to and fro. Even if she is there, you may look all day and not see her. And you can stare right at her front door and mistake it for a tiny patch of dirt. But if you are very lucky, you will see her tiny trap-door lifted. Out peeps her head and a few of her eight long legs. If a bug happens to scuttle by, the spider grabs him. She hauls him downstairs for dinner, closing the door behind her.

The amazing spider is a stay-at-home who lives most of her life in the ground. Her home is a burrow six inches deep and three-quarters of an inch wide. She dug it herself and neatly lined it with webbing of silken threads. The top is smoothly bevelled or slanted. She made a lid with sloping sides to fit perfectly into the hole. It is a solid little door made from crumbs of dirt matted together with silken threads. The top of the trap door is covered with grits and grains of dirt so that it looks just like the ground around it.

Enemies of Insects

Spiders are the enemies of bugs and beetles and other small creatures. But the spiders themselves have enemies. They are eaten by birds and frogs, toads and lizards. The fat trap-door spider is hunted by parasitic wasps. She hides behind her hinged door, watching and waiting to grab her victims as they pass by. But that wonderful little door also protects her from her spider-eating foes. However, if she fails to shut it fast enough, a wasp or some other enemy may dash down the burrow and grab her.

The trap-door spider lays her eggs and brings up her batch of babies down inside the cosy burrow. This is another reason why she is careful to keep her door closed. She has young ones to protect. The young spiders stay in the burrow until they are perhaps eight months old. Then they leave and each one goes off to build a home and most likely to live there for the rest of her life. The new home may be small and a bit ragged. But by the time a spider is fully grown, it has been enlarged and improved to look just like the trap-door home that Mama built.

Andy sends a 14" World Book Globe to Patrick McBrearty, age 14, of Huntsville, Alabama, for his question:

Why do they put jewels inside watches?

Jewels are famous for their beauty and the proper place for them should, you would think, be out on display. It seems odd to hide them inside the workings of a watch. Nevertheless, we are told that this watch has five jewels inside it, this one seven or some other uneven number. All of these are fine watches, and the finest may have 23 jewels. These jewels are small, smooth scraps of ruby, diamond or sapphire.

A fine watch is a small miracle of delicate machinery. It has interlocking wheels of assorted sizes, hair-thin springs and dozens of miniature parts all fitted together with infinitesimal bolts and screws. Special alloys that expand evenly are used for the metal parts to keep the delicate machinery in balance. But corundum jewels work best as pivots, bearings and other moving parts. These jewels are hard and very durable and normal changes in temperature fail to make them expand or contract. They are more dependable than the best alloys. This is why an expensive watch may have its dainty parts made of precious little jewels instead of metal.

Cancer Can Develop In Several Types

By DR. WALTER C. ALVAREZ

There are many types of cancer which develop from many different types of cells in different organs. There are cancers of the thyroid gland, the liver, the tiny cells that make insulin, the ovary, the kidney, the prostate gland, and the bones.

Alvarez

Leukemia seems to be a cancer of the blood-forming organs. Curiously, there is an acute and fast-growing leukemia, a chronic and slow-growing form of leukemia, and a rare form that may not grow at all.

There is a special group of cancers, called sarcomas, which form in muscles or bones; also lymphomas that form in lymphatic tissues (lymph is the milky fluid that bathes our cells and nourishes them). These cancers are likely to appear in young or middle-aged people, and even in children.

There are also specialized types of cancer, like the one that grown in the eye of an infant or in the kidney of a child. The one that grows in the eye is likely to be inherited. A peculiar type of tumor is one that grows in the brain. It can spread like a cancer, but it is peculiar in that it does not scatter out through the body.

Then there is Hodgkin's disease. This is peculiar in that when first found it may already be scattered throughout the body. In some ways, its growth suggests an infection with a virus, but as yet no one knows what causes it. It is a cancer-like disease, in that it tends to damage many parts of the body, much as a cancer does.

A peculiarity of Hodgkin's disease is that if one discovers it early and treats it with powerful X-rays and chemicals, it may quit growing for eight or 10 years or more. There are reports of cases in which it disappeared 20 years ago, and so far has not come back.

Multiple myeloma is a curious cancer-like disease which quickly scatters through the bones. A melanoma is a black cancer which may seem to start in the skin or the eye.

Curious is the fact that there are sarcomas that do not grow beyond a certain point. Also, in some 5 per cent of people, a cancer of the breast — even when untreated — will not grow much, and hence will not kill the patient. Cancer quacks get great credit for having apparently cured some of the many persons whose cancer might well have stopped growing without any treatment.

A curious tumor is the carcinoid one — a little lump which, when one looks at sections of it with the microscope, resembles a cancer. But commonly it does not scatter to produce metastases (daughter growths). Today, these tumors greatly interest us physicians because they produce a substance called serotonin, which is coming more and more into prominence as a possible cause of certain mental aberrations.

GROUP 'O' IN DEMAND

The Canadian Red Cross in Victoria is appealing for Group O blood donors during a three-day clinic continuing today and Thursday.

There were 210 donors on Tuesday, first day of the three-day clinic.

The clinic is being held between 6 and 9 tonight at Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street. Thursday it will move to the Institute of Adult Studies and Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Keeping an eye on values?

Eaton National Brands stand up to the closest scrutiny. Before any product receives an Eaton label, it goes through our own Research Bureau. It is use-tested and quality controlled. Then, too, some of our Research people spend all their time figuring ways to up-date products to fit your present and future needs. You'd be surprised at some of the things they come up with—like thermal underwear for the Canadian North, Colour TV that overcomes fringe area viewing limitations. They are both as different as can be, but both are what you wanted. Eaton's sees to that. That's why smart shoppers look for Eaton labels. They know, too, that these labels are on products with a reputation for setting the Canadian Standard of Value.

'...But Definitely Canada Is Bisexual'

OTTAWA (CP)—It probably had to happen.

A movemrnt has been launched for a royal commission on equal status for men.

John Kroeker of Ottawa, who calls himself a former civil servant, actuary and general boat-rocker, said today he sent a Valentine telegram to Prime Minister Pearson Tuesday with the message:

"Whereas in your wisdom you have established a royal commission to examine the question of equality for women and whereas Canada, whether or not it is bicultural, bilingual or binational is definitely bisexual, take note that a petition has been launched to request that you establish forthwith a royal commission to examine the question of equality for men."

The telegram said certain sensitive areas such as employment as bunny waitresses or topless dancers "show marked discrimination verging on total sexclusion of men.

"What man could make a go of gogo?"

Mr. Kroeker was dismissed from his post as an actuary with the federal government after he made statements critical of the Canada Pension Plan.

'No Opting Out' On Hospitals Says Bennett

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett Tuesday night confirmed that regional districts will be created throughout British Columbia unilaterally by the government to build hospitals.

"They will be set up exactly like school districts—and there'll be no opting out," he told reporters after he announced in the legislature that legislation will be forthcoming at this session.

Mr. Bennett warned the legislature that "there will be a little moaning and gnashing of teeth as there was when the school districts were set up."

But just as the 1945 Cameron report found that all municipal school boards had to be combined into present school districts "they (regional hospital districts) have all got to be in or the whole thing will collapse."

He recalled that Herbert Anscomb, former Coalition finance minister from Oak Bay, bitterly opposed inclusion of Oak Bay in the Greater Victoria school district and the same sort of opposition was repeated in other areas.

Outside the House, the premier said that the coalition government precipitated some of the controversy by establishing the school districts without first creating a financing authority for them to sell bonds in the money markets.

HEAD IT OFF

He said the Social Credit government overcame much of the lingering opposition in 1954 by creating the school construction financing authority. The government hopes to head off some of the reaction against the regional districts by its announcement last week that a hospital construction financing authority will be established with an improved provincial sharing formula for the new regional districts.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who previously denied there would be any compulsion attached to the new regional hospital districts, maintained his position.

He said the premier's reference to no opting out referred only to the establishment of regional districts as geographical units but local ratepayers would still have to approve acceptance of a hospital construction function for such districts by a referendum.

VOTE AGAIN

After that, they still would have a vote on each hospital construction program just as they do with school construction programs.

He said that probably 25 to 30 regional districts would be

'SAVAGE' SENTENCE PROTESTED

LONDON (CP)—Home Secretary Roy Jenkins has been urged to intervene in the case of a young woman who, convicted of driving while under disqualification, was sentenced to three months—which means she will have an expected baby in jail.

"A most savage sentence," says the Daily Express in a scathing editorial.

Lillian Baker, 22, burst into tears Tuesday when she received the three-month sentence at Bracknell, Berkshire, for driving while disqualified.

Magistrate Leonard Hackett told Mrs. Baker:

"Your children will be taken into care and all arrangements will be made for you to give birth to your third child at Holloway prison."

Roaming Satellite Returns

CANBERRA, Australia (UPI) — An errant U.S. satellite apparently landed in Australia today after carrying insects and other organisms on an unscheduled nine-week trip through space.

The report came shortly after the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) laboratory at Sunnyvale, Calif., announced the capsule had re-entered the atmosphere on its 999th orbit around the earth.

The capsule contained 13 experiments, including insects and other organisms, when launched.

"Most of them froze once the support system, planned for a three-day trip, terminated," the NASA spokesman said. However, he added that the material recovered would still be valuable in research.

ONE DEAD and nine injured was the toll when an explosion and fire gutted this apartment house Tuesday night in the Montreal suburb of Mount Royal. The victim is believed to be a young girl. No other details were released by officials. (CP Wirephoto.)

Low-interest loans of up to $1,500, federally guaranteed, to families with incomes of $4,000 or less, as anti-poverty measure.

For used-car field, a fixed maximum interest rate in financing purchases and central registries to record history of each auto.

Immediate consideration, in the public interest, of a fixed upper limit on annual interest charged in credit transactions.

Extension of Small Loans Act to increase loan maximum to $5,000 from $1,500.

Three-day cooling-off period in which buyer can return goods and recover payments on purchases made in off-store premises.

Anti-combines legislation to regulate manufacturers, distributors and dealers, particularly of cars, in operation of own sales financing concerns.

Scathing criticism of department store revolving credit accounts, also known as open-end, cyclical, budget or easy-payment plans.

Low Income Aid In Poverty War

OTTAWA (CP)—A parliamentary committee today recommended that the federal government guarantee low-interest, long-term bank loans for low-income families.

The proposal was included in a wide-ranging report on consumer credit tabled by a joint Senate - Commons committee after more than three years' study.

It said the consumer loans for families with incomes of $4,000 or less were necessary in the war on poverty.

Roundly condemning the credit practices of some businesses, the committee urged full disclosure of all interest and service charges at the time of sale.

The committee urged federal and provincial governments to join in writing the recommendations into law, and in backing them up with adequate inspection and review machinery.

It sharply criticized so-called revolving credit plans operated by many big department stores, in which buyers do not learn until many weeks after a purchase what the monthly carrying charges will be.

"The game appears to be one in which all the cards are in the hands of one player — the seller," the committee said.

Its main recommendation was that "the total cost of credit expressed both as a lump sum and in terms of simple annual interest," be given the user of any time-payment plan at the time of sale.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Senator David Croll (L—Ontario) and Ron Basford (L — Vancouver-Burrard), made the recommendations in a 40,000-word report tabled in both houses of Parliament.

CROLL
. . . bears his stamp

It said consumer credit is a useful facility for purchasers and a growing factor in business, when used properly.

Essential Purchases During Need

In fact, the committee proposed extending the field by having the federal government guarantee bank loans at low rates of interest and long repayment terms for families with incomes of $4,000 and less. This would help them make essential and thrifty purchases in time of great need without incurring the heavy cost of commercial consumer loans.

But the committee came down heavily, and tartly, on consumer loaning practices that might cripple an imprudent buyer.

It did not recommend a specific ceiling on interest rate and service charges, but said the government should consider one. The committee, however, called exorbitant the interest of 18 per cent a year and more involved in some department store revolving credit plans.

Other main recommendations:

- Extend the existing federal Small Loans Act to include loans up to $5,000, instead of $1,500, at low monthly interest rates.
- Extend scope of anti-combines legislation to regulate manufacturers, distributors and dealers of products, such as automobiles, in the operation of their own sales financing concerns.
- Require finance companies to assume obligations to repair and service faulty goods when they buy promissory notes or other retail finance contracts from vendors.
- Allow the buyer three days to reconsider purchases made on credit from canvassers or in other off-store premises.
- Set a maximum rate of interest that may be charged in financing used car purchases, and establish central registries recording the history of each automobile.

Senator Croll the Sparkplug

The committee of 12 senators and 24 MPs was given its assignment to examine the consumer credit field Nov. 8, 1963. It had numerous changes of personnel, but Senator Croll remained its sparkplug throughout and the report showed signs of his energy.

Since jurisdiction in the broad field of consumer credit is divided between the federal government and the provinces by the British North America Act, the committee's recommendations were made generally to all governments. Some provinces now have interest disclosure laws.

Two main problems in the use of consumer credit were emphasized in the 3¼ years of hearings, the report said.

"The first concerns the troubles besetting those who buy on credit without understanding the price they are paying for borrowing.

"The second concerns the plight of low-income families who are from time to time in desperate need of credit for necessary goods or services but to whom commercial credit is either not readily available or not available at all."

The report made repeated reference to the problems of low-income families who become mired in debts from which they can never hope to extricate themselves.

"We recommended that the federal government make available, through the regular banking systems, guaranteed consumer loans under specified conditions to all with annual family incomes of $4,000 or less.

"The loans would be repayable over an extended period and would bear a low rate of interest. They would be made only for provident and produc-

Hanoi Area Bombed, Says Russian Press

Times News Services

SAIGON—The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Hanoi that American planes bombed areas around the North Vietnamese capital at noon today.

Tass said Hanoi rumbled to the sounds of heavy anti-aircraft guns and bursts of rockets as American planes swept in over the city and bombed and strafed industries and "populated localities" around Hanoi in bright sunshine.

U.S. REPLIES

Tass did not say the planes bombed targets inside the city.

(The Pentagon said no targets closer than 35 miles from Hanoi and 15 miles from Haiphong were listed on reports from the Vietnam command today. The targets included barges 15 miles southeast of Haiphong and railroad yards 35 miles south of Hanoi and 45 miles southwest of Haiphong.)

South Korean marines today killed 243 Communist troops in a savage pre-dawn battle, using karate blows to chop down attackers who breached Korean defences.

It was the South Korean's biggest engagement in the war and one of the largest full-scale Communist assaults in recent months.

CHUNG ON VISIT

The battle, staged in ricelands about eight miles northwest of Quang Ngai, 330 miles northeast of Saigon, conincided with the arrival in South Vietnam of South Korean Premier Il Kwon Chung for a four-day official visit.

Meanwhile in Moscow, Pravda accused Washington of deliberate lying when it declared that North Vietnam had shown no desire for a peaceful settlement during the Lunar New Year ceasefire.

American spokesmen justified the renenwed bombing by saying they had received no sign that Hanoi wanted to move toward a peaceful settlement, the Communist party daily says.

In a dispatch from Washington, Pravda says President Johnson "had completely ignored Hanoi's proposals" which hinged on the end of bombing raids on the North.

Moore Returning To Vietnam

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Victor Moore, Canadian representative on the International Control Commission, has returned to Saigon after talks in Ottawa.

His mission is to keep open the channel of access to Hanoi, it was learned here today.

His return to Vietnam Saturday was a surprise development. Earlier it had been announced he had completed 14 months in Vietnam, his tour of duty, and his successor will be Ormond Dier, who is scheduled to proceed to Saigon on March 1.

With Mr. Martin convinced the time is "ripe" to push ahead with negotiations to try and bring an end to the fighting, Mr. Moore was sent back and will be there until his successor is ready to take up the assignment.

Mr. Moore's return to Saigon was one more development in the strenuous behind-the-scenes efforts External Affairs Minister Martin has been making to get the combatants to the bargaining table.

Pentagon Stormed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The main doors of the Pentagon were locked for about half an hour today when a shoving, shouting crowd of about 2,500 women tried to storm the entrance, protesting the Vietnam war. The doors were re-opened on the orders of Defence Secretary Robert McNamara, who sent word that assistant secretary Thomas D. Morris would see a delegation of six of the demonstrators.

WIRE BRIEFS

Ship Sent to Kenya

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. missile tracking ship Sword Knot, with 11 Negroes among its 67-member crew, has been diverted from the port of Durban, South Africa, to Mombasa, Kenya, the U.S. defence department announced today.

German-U.K. Talks

BONN (AP) — Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger and Prime Minister Wilson began two days of talks today on Britain's candidacy for the European Common Market, the future of British troops in West Germany and other matters affecting their two countries and Europe.

No Agreement

QUEBEC (CP) — A meeting early today between Premier Daniel Johnson and representatives of striking Quebec teachers ended with no agreement on a new proposal by the teachers to end the walkouts without passage of a government bill which would force them back to classes and remove their right to strike for 18 months.

CIA Paid Millions to Students

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency has supplied millions of dollars in secret financial support to at least three youth organizations in addition to the National Student Association, the Evening Star reports.

The state department acknowledged Tuesday that the government's top espionage and intelligence agency had for more than a decade financed operations abroad by the NSA, the largest college student organization in the United States.

But the reported CIA support of the other three groups had not previously been disclosed. The Star identifies the organization as the U.S. Youth Council, a confederation of 36 political, religious, student and service youth groups with headquarters in New York; the World Assembly of Youth, a confederation of national youth groups from 54 Western and non-aligned nations; and the International Student Conference of Leiden, Netherlands, a similar confederation of about 60 national student organizations from Western and non-aligned nations.

The newspaper says CIA funds for those organizations, totalling millions of dollars during more than a decade, were channelled through foundations. It identifies the principal donor to NSA and the three other groups as the Foundation for Youth and Student Affairs in New York.

The CIA had no immediate comment on The Star story.

The report of additional CIA support came amid protests and demand in Congress for a prompt investigation of the agency's ties with NSA.

In another development, the New York Times said President Johnson intervened in the controversy and instructed the CIA Tuesday to close out all secret programs of aid to student groups. A White House spokesman denied the report.

Within the four organizations, The Star article said, the members carried on a limited amount of intelligence work for the CIA.

Deadly Gas Threat Ended In Huge Dock Blaze

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—A $3,000,000 waterfront blaze was brought under control late Tuesday night after firemen used dynamite to choke off the fire that threatened to spread to a $100,000,000 pulp plant.

The blaze at one time threatened to release a deadly cloud of chlorine gas over this northern coastal city, prompting fire officials to issue an evacuation warning that stood for more than an hour.

The warning was called off when powdermen dynamited 1,000 feet of the flaming wharf, preventing the blaze spreading from the 3,000 - foot dock to three chlorine tanks at the pulp mill.

Civil defence authorities said if the fire had reached the tanks they would have exploded and prevailing winds would have carried the gas to Prince Rupert from the Columbia Cellulose Co., site on Watson Island, 12 miles to the east.

Fire chief Willis Hill of Prince Rupert made the decicision to order the alert.

"Everybody in Prince Rupert could have been wiped out," he said.

"That chlorine gas is dynamite. It's really dangerous stuff.

STARTS NEAR WAREHOUSE

The blaze broke out near a warehouse on the long, narrow company dock late Tuesday afternoon. By the time fire crews arrived, flames were racing toward the landward end and three large chemical tanks located 200 feet from the end of the wharf.

Firemen called for 20 cases of dynamite to prevent the blaze from reaching the shore while civil defence and pilot officials used radio and television to warn of a possible evacuation.

Two separate charges were placed and blew out more than 1,000 feet of the dock. Firemen, police and company officials scrambled for shelter when huge chunks of blazing wood slashed into the water near to shore.

Two oil barges tied alongside the wharf were destroyed, but no deepsea vessels were loading at the time. There were no injuries but Columbia Cellulose estimated the loss of dock facilities at more than $3,000,000.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15, 1967--PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

South in the outdoors-minded city of Bellevue, Wash., there lives an expatriate British Columbian whom this column has indirectly landed in a jackpot both deep and dire.

The victim's name is W. Wallis, and he came to my attention when one of his Victoria relatives called me a few days ago.

Mr. Wallis, I learned, is not only a sport fisherman but a man who likes to talk about fishing, when he can get a word in edgewise. Since Bellevue is situated in pretty fair steelhead country, this is by no means easy.

However, when the talk turned to record fish, a while back, he managed in a modest sort of way to suggest that B.C. steelies are just beginning to make their growth at the point where Washington's leave off.

"We hold the world record on both commercial and sport gear with a 43 and a 36-pounder," he told his skeptical listeners, "and here's a clipping to prove it!"

At this crucial point, we will return to the relative who phoned me. "But he had lost the clipping," says she, "and the only way he can convince people he's not a world-record liar is by getting another!"

Well, far be it from me to leave any B.C. booster in that fix. I have sent our exile not one but two clippings . . . and if those don't convince the doubters, there are others up here in the homeland of big steelhead who will corroborate my facts.

★

Among the quiet wars of peace is Greater Victoria Water District's struggle with a deer population that regards its new crop evergreen seedlings as choice fodder.

No sooner would an area be planted with Douglas firs to replace those harvested in the water district's model selective logging operation, than the deer would seek them out. Overnight, they would browse a sidehill clear of its little new trees.

Supposedly repellant chemical sprays and foul-smelling compounds failed to deter them. The deer considered these mere sauces to whet their appetites for an evergreen snack. Controlled hunting seasons on the watershed hardly left a dint, and the cougar that frequent those woods served only to keep the blacktail bands in healthy balance.

So it went until a couple of years ago, when the water district guardians decided that nothing but deer-proof fences would save the young growth.

Plantings are now securely enclosed by eight-foot wire mesh fences which will remain until the young trees reach a "safe" height of over five feet. At present, the water district strings from 5,000 to 10,000 feet of fence a year, and is thoroughly satisfied with the results.

"We're comfortably off with the deer now," Ron Upward tells me. "They bounce from the wire with no harm to the fence or themselves. We do have a few bear too, though, and when they're travelling, they don't like to change course. When a bear comes to one of our fences he charges straight through, and leaves a second break on the other side of the protected area."

Posts are no problem — the loggers split them from cedar windfalls — and eventually, a nylon mesh still in the experimental stage may replace the metal wire. The nylon would disintegrate in about 10 years, by which time trees are past the stage where they tickle blacktail palates.

★

The honest hunter has taken many a black eye in recent years because of the antics of a hot-trigger brigade that welcomes the slightest excuse to pepper any and all targets.

In addition to the human casualties these rack up through the idiotic practice of "sound-shooting" at anything that rustles, they also indulge themselves in a wide range of vandal tactics.

Of these, the most noxious is the cruel sort of caper that reduced a reef-bound Newfoundland whale to a mass of infected blubber.

Why they do it, I'll never know — but eventually, the irresponsibles who blast off so wantonly are going to bring about a near if not total ban on sporting firearms.

The Great Centennial Cover-Up

By PETE LOUDON

Beards are in.

General chairman L. J. Wallace of the provincial planning committee says so.

"Beards fit into the general theme of centennial celebrations very well," he said in an interview.

Beards in recent years have been the badge of the beatnik, worn often as a protest against conformity. But not any more.

Beards worn in our centenary of Confederation do honor to our pioneers, he said. He pointed out that many organizations are holding beard-growing contest. And many men are growing them individually, without prompting.

These include university students, civil servants, one member of the legislature, people in all categories.

But so far there isn't a hair to be seen on the chins of any member of the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of British Columbia.

When this was mentioned to Mr. Wallace, Mr. Wallace just said, "Ha."

He quickly went on to say that a provincial beard-growing contest is a major feature of the Williams Lake Stampede on July 1.

We told Mr. Wallace that some beard growers have phoned the Times to say they have been objects of ridicule.

One wife complained that people who josh her husband about his beard do not connect his efforts with the national trend toward honoring our bearded forefathers.

She said his efforts should be given support of the centennial planners. Mr. Wallace has complied with bare-faced enthusiasm.

And the Times artist, in the pictures above, has provided Mr. Wallace with a collection of beard styles because he hasn't had time to make a choice.

Styles offered include Beelzebub, Blue Yonder, Bushman and Biblical.

Anyone deciding to go hairy over beards in Greater Victoria may make dough while they grow. Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a multi-prize contest as a highlight of its annual exhibition and fair in May. Beards must be started since Jan. 1, and entries close May 1.

Grow, man, grow.

New Exam Policy Detailed

Major Cutback Planned In High School Tests

Education Minister Leslie Peterson today announced a new examination policy will be introduced into the province's high schools this June.

The number of subjects in which students will have to write departmental examinations will be severely chopped to the elective subjects and the marks will only constitute half of the final grading.

Grading in required subjects will be handled entirely within the schools.

A special system of grade 12 examination on a voluntary basis will be established to qualify students for government scholarships.

TWO PARTS

These will be in two equal parts, each scored at 100 points.

The first part will encompass questions for students who must take the examination to graduate in their elective subject. The second part will be only for the scholarship candidates with special questions to test their ability in the subject.

Scholarship candidates will write at least two of the two-part examinations but they can write more if they wish and only their best two results will be counted.

"School marks will not enter into this scholarship examination which will be a direct competition among those candidates undertaking it," he said in a speech text prepared for delivery this afternoon in the legislature's budget debate.

Mr. Peterson said the new policy drops all departmental examinations except those "given at the Grade 12 level in the specialties of the academic and technical program.

EXTENSION

"Departmental examinations are therefore restricted to those courses in which the student has selected through his own interests or aims.

"This principle is only an extension of that which started many decades ago. It is possible only because of the increased training and professional development of secondary school staffs."

In addition, he said, even in those courses where departmental examinations will be required, the principle that written testing alone is insufficient to grade a pupil will be observed and the school's own evaluation of the student's work will count for 50 per cent of the final grade.

"In all examinable courses, the school's evaluation of the pupil's work will receive equal consideration with the evaluation on the basis of the departmental examination," he said.

Accredited schools will continue to be designated by the department permitting them "to recommend a proportion of their pupils without departmental examination in those subjects which they would normally write," Mr. Peterson added.

SANDOWN

Man Faces Charge In Fire

A man being held in custody on the Mainland is expected to be charged in connection with the $150,000 fire at Sandown race track last fall.

A former groom at Sandown, the man may be charged with "setting fire to a material likely to set fire" to buildings and property, it was learned.

The Oct. 16 blaze which broke out the night before the last day of the autumn meeting here killed 13 thoroughbred horses.

The B.C. fire marshal, who with RCMP officers and Saanich detectives investigated the fire, said the suspect's name cannot be released until he is formally charged.

RAN AT LARGE

It was first thought to have been caused by an electrical fault but that theory was discounted as the stables had just been rewired at a cost of $20,000.

Buildings at Sandown were insured for their replacement value.

Pair Injured In One of Two Car Accidents

David Bellamy, 2355 Bellamy, told Colwood RCMP he was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car.

An estimated $1,500 damage was done to the car, police said.

One man suffered a broken foot and another head cuts when their car ran off the Patricia Bay Highway near Amity Tuesday night.

Archie Jones of Sidney and Leonard Norris of Chemainus were treated at Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney. The car was proceeding south on the highway said Sidney RCMP, who are still investigating.

'Company' Man Denies Causing Disturbance

A man who said he was employed "in a manner of speaking" with the Company of Young Canadians, pleaded not guilty today in central court to a charge of causing a disturbance.

Bail was set at $100.

A companion, Phyllis Robertson, 18, of 919 Vancouver St., pleaded guilty to the same charge and was remanded to Feb. 22 for a pre-sentence report.

The two were arrested after "shouting and screaming" was reported on the north side of the 700 block Yates St. at 8:55 p.m. Tuesday.

A city police officer said 25 persons were in the area at the time.

Questioning Venables, Magistrate Ostler asked if he was employed.

"In a manner of speaking," he answered. He said he was on the Victoria staff of the Company of Young Canadians.

Guns Stolen At Airport

Five guns were stolen from the offices of Vancouver Island Helicopters at Victoria International Airport over Monday night, police report.

Four are semi-automatic .22 calibre pitsols and another was described as a .32.

Ask The Times

Q. Who have more heart ailments, men or women? V.M.

A. Provincial health department puts men in the lead. In 1965 B.C. hospitals treated 17,022 heart disease cases—56.15 per cent were male and 43.85 per cent female.

Q. What is the salary of a deputy minister in the provincial service? T.H.

A. Some receive $20,000 and some $19,000 plus certain expenses. This is more than the ministers they serve, who receive salaries of $17,500. But their sessional allowances, etc., $6,500 basic, push them ahead again.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problmes. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Vancouver's Home Stays, Too Costly to Move Here

Captain George Vancouver's home will not be coming to British Columbia.

That's the gist of a letter from G. S. Gibson, deputy agent-general for B.C. in London, England.

Writing to H. P. Plasterer, 340 Island Highway, one of the local residents pushing for purchase of Captain Vancouver's birthplace and the restoration of the home in B.C., Mr. Gibson said the cost would be prohibitive.

The deputy agent-general also said there is some doubt that the King's Lynn house in question was the birthplace of the illustrious sea captain who put B.C. on the map.

'NO RESEMBLANCE'

"There is a small remaining section of what used to be the home of John Vancouver, the captain's father, who was a collector of dues in the borough of King's Lynn. This is in a parlous state of repair, and has been altered over the years so that it now bears no resemblance to its former state," the letter says.

Floor joists have been cut out and replaced by new timbers and the brick walls are so crumbly that even careful demolition would result in irrepairable damage, Mr. Gibson continues.

"The arched doorway shown in B.C. papers of a few days ago is not the door to this building, but was the door of the Friends Meeting House," the letter states.

NO RECORD

While Captain Vancouver undoubtedly spent some of his childhood in the house in question, there is no record to say that he was born there.

"Vancouver senior lived there, and undoubtedly Captain Vancouver likewise, but there is no record to say that he was born there, in the large house, and certainly he would not have been born in the remaining section," Mr. Gibson wrote. "In that day this piece must have been a workshop or storage room."

Even if the house in question was the birthplace of Captain Vancouver, Mr. Gibson stated that the cost of dismantling it and shipping it to B.C. would run between $20,000 and $25,000.

And, he added, that would not include the cost of rebuilding.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, who along with Liberal MLA Alan Macfarlane, had expressed interest in acquiring the historic property for B.C. display, said such a purchase now was "obviously out."

'CADET WITH A DIFFERENCE' REWARDED FOR GOOD CONDUCT

Officer cadet Gerald Kelly was presented today with the Canadian Forces Decoration in a ceremony at Canadian Forces School Venture.

What made the ceremony unusual was that officer cadets are usually newcomers to the services.

And the decoration is awarded for 12 years good conduct service.

It just so happened that Cadet Kelly was accepted for officer training at the same time he completed 12 years with the air force.

Government Violates Ad Laws Says Haynes

And, added B.C. Federation of Labour secretary Ray Haynes, "papers by printing these ads, and not saying to a person we can't print as it is a violation of the act, are also legally responsible."

His comments followed a warning by the B.C. labor department Tuesday that "numerous advertisements in the daily newspapers seeking applicants for employment" contravene the Fair Employment Practices Act.

The department, in a widely-circulated statement, sought the "co-operation of everyone" in complying with the act.

Advertisements by the B.C. Civil Service Commission contain a restriction that only Commonwealth citizens are acceptable.

Recent advertisements use the words "candidates must be Commonwealth citizens" and "applicants must be Commonwealth citizens" and "requires Commonwealth citizenship."

A labor department spokesman confirmed that the government is not legally bound by the Fair Employment Practices Act.

No act passed by the legislature applies to the government unless the act states so.

Under the Fair Employment Practices Act, "no person shall use or circulate any form of application or publish any advertisement in connection with employment" which expresses "any limitation, specification or preference as to the race, religion, color, nationality, ancestry or place of origin of any person."

The labor department said it is "clearly improper," under the legislation to use words such as boy, girl and young and phrases designating exclusive age groups, such as "20 to 30 years."

Mr. Haynes commented it is "about time" the department took some action. The federation had repeatedly asked the government to do this.

Club Seeks Transfer Of Dates

B.C. Jockey Club will apply to the B.C. Racing Commission to transfer to Vancouver dates for horse racing at Sandown track near Sidney.

This was revealed today by Jack Diamond, co-owner of the jockey club, who announced Tuesday there would be no racing this year at Sandown.

Mr. Diamond's statement came after the Jockey Club and North Saanich council reached an impasse over licence fees and council demands for fire-fighting and sanitary improvements at the track.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner, to whom the Racing Commission is responsible, said he would have to study the application to transfer racing dates to the Mainland "but I would be personally disappointed if racing could not continue on the Saanich Peninsula".

"It has been quite a feature on the local scene, and well received. I would hope that local differences can be ironed out."

NO DECISION

The attorney-general said the government has made no decision to act on representations to lower the 21½ per cent mutuel tax, the highest in North America.

The budget before the current legislature does not contemplate any lowering of the tax and "I personally would not forecast that it would go down."

The Sandown meet was scheduled to run from Sept. 16 to Oct. 14.

Glen McDonald, chairman of the Racing Commission, declined to comment on the transfer application. But he pointed out that the commission denied a request "a few years ago to transfer the dates to Vancouver."

The commission then told Bill Randall "to go dark" (close Sandown) if he felt Sandown was a losing proposition but that we would not transfer the dates."

However, McDonald admitted that the commission "isn't bound today by yesterday's decision."

"We felt at the time that the dates shouldn't be transferred because it wouldn't be fair to the people of Vancouver, the bettors and the people in the industry."

Mr. Diamond said the Jockey Club plans no meetings with the North Saanich council.

New Saanich Bylaw to Curb Roaming Dogs, Pets in Homes

Although no details are being disclosed, the bylaw is expected to take a much tougher attitude towards roaming dogs and their owners and may include restrictions on the number of pets allowed in homes.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said the bylaw "will be coming forward in a matter of some weeks."

Council has taken an increasingly stronger stand against roaming dogs, resulting in a score or more court cases recently.

'BACK SEAT'

"I like dogs—in their place and under control. I like children and adults much more. In my book, dogs take a very definite back seat."

Under existing regulations, dogs must not be allowed at large unless accompanied and under control of a person or unless they are on a leash.

Dogs must not be allowed on public beaches, parks, commercial areas or public buildings unless on a leash and "no dog shall be allowed to bark persistently so as to disturb the quiet and peace of the neighborhood."

WORRIED

Reeve Curtis said kennel operators and dog fanciers have expressed fears they are "going to be interfered with.

"I have tried to indicate to them the bylaw will be reviewed with people like this and this is what we are aiming at.

IT MAY NO LONGER be as vital to Victoria's domestic water supply as it once was, but Smith's Hill reservoir still plays an important role in other ways. The four-acre 18 million gallon water supply is looked on with favor by fire insurance underwriters who state that without that huge reserve, insurance rates would increase. The reservoir is owned by the Greater Victoria Water District but is useful only to the city. At a recent board meeting it was suggested that the city purchase the reservoir from the district—but retain it as a reservoir if for no other purpose than to hold insurance rates down. Bigotry Wins the Day In New Jersey Election

WAYNE, N.J. (AP) — Two Jewish candidates for the Wayne Township board of education have been defeated after an election campaign in which their religion was an issue.

The two, Jack Mandell, incumbent, and Robert Kraus, ran fourth and fifth Tuesday night in a field of five seeking three seats on the nine - man board.

Elected were two Protestants and a Roman Catholic. Miller is Protestant.

Miller, in response to a request for his views, made a statement to the local daily newspaper, Wayne Today, Feb. 7, which said:

TAKE AWAY CHRISTMAS?

"Most Jewish people are liberals, especially when it comes to spending for education. If Kraus and Mandell are elected for three years, with Lafer—Fred Lafer who also is Jewish—on for two more years, that's a 3-6 vote. It would only take two more votes for a majority and Wayne could be in real financial trouble.

"Two more votes and we lose what is left of Christ in our Christmas celebrations in our schools. Think about it."

Miller was censured by his school board colleagues and asked to resign, but refused.

He was denounced by local, state and federal officials. Mandell called him an anti-Semite and a bigot.

FAMILIES THREATENED

Anonymous telephone threats were made against the families of Mandell and of other Jewish figures in the community.

The local newspaper reported a flood of letters to the editor which it described as anti-Jewish.

The school budget expansion was defeated by a margin of more than three to one.

CHILD KILLED, DRIVER HUNTED

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police were searching today for the driver of a car that struck and killed six-year-old Michelle Blankenstein Tuesday as she crossed a street in a residential area. Police said the car struck her in a marked crosswalk near a school, then left the scene at a high rate of speed.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

WASHINGTON (UPI) — About 5,500 American scientists asked President Johnson Tuesday to halt use of riot gas and anti-crop chemicals in Vietnam on the grounds it sets a dangerous precedent in warfare which would lead to world disaster.

League Clears Snag in Dates

TORONTO (CP) — Dick Walsh, of Los Angeles, commissioner of the new North American Soccer League, said Tuesday the schedule for the coming season will end in time for Scottish League teams to take part.

The North American circuit is inviting soccer teams from the United Kingdom and Europe to represent 10 member cities in the United States and two in Canada this season.

Hibernians of the Scottish League said Monday they would not be able to represent Toronto if the NASL went through with plans to continue its schedule to July 25. Other Scottish League clubs were reported considering withdrawal as well.

HAVE SOLUTION

"We have talked back and forth to England and we are satisfied we have worked out a solution," Walsh said.

The schedule will begin on May 28 and end July 9 with the championship game July 16.

Kenneth MacIntyre, a Hibernian director, said Monday his club asked a solution by Tuesday. "If they can arrange to finish 10 days earlier and bring our matches closer together, then we'll be delighted to go."

Five other clubs have been announced as NASL entries—Dundee United which will represent Dallas, Aberdeen which will represent Washington, Stoke City representing Cleveland, Sunderland representing Vancouver and Glentoran representing Detroit.

Walsh said the remaining six NASL cities—Boston, Chicago, New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Houston — have overseas clubs lined up and will announce them soon.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEB. 15, 1967--PAGE 25

Arthur Mayse

South in the outdoors-minded city of Bellevue, Wash., there lives an expatriate British Columbian whom this column has indirectly landed in a jackpot both deep and dire.

The victim's name is W. Wallis, and he came to my attention when one of his Victoria relatives called me a few days ago.

Mr. Wallis, I learned, is not only a sport fisherman but a man who likes to talk about fishing, when he can get a word in edgewise. Since Bellevue is situated in pretty fair steelhead country, this is by no means easy.

However, when the talk turned to record fish, a while back, he managed in a modest sort of way to suggest that B.C. steelies are just beginning to make their growth at the point where Washington's leave off.

"We hold the world record on both commercial and sport gear with a 43 and a 36-pounder," he told his skeptical listeners, "and here's a clipping to prove it!"

At this crucial point, we will return to the relative who phoned me. "But he had lost the clipping," says she, "and the only way he can convince people he's not a world-record liar is by getting another!"

Well, far be it from me to leave any B.C. booster in that fix. I have sent our exile not one but two clippings . . . and if those don't convince the doubters, there are others up here in the homeland of big steelhead who will corroborate my facts.

Among the quiet wars of peace is Greater Victoria Water District's struggle with a deer population that regards its new crop evergreen seedlings as choice fodder.

No sooner would an area be planted with Douglas firs to replace those harvested in the water district's model selective logging operation, than the deer would seek them out. Overnight, they would browse a sidehill clear of its little new trees.

Supposedly repellant chemical sprays and foul-smelling compounds failed to deter them. The deer considered these mere sauces to whet their appetites for an evergreen snack. Controlled hunting seasons on the watershed hardly left a dint, and the cougar that frequent those woods served only to keep the blacktail bands in healthy balance.

So it went until a couple of years ago, when the water district guardians decided that nothing but deer-proof fences would save the young growth.

Plantings are now securely enclosed by eight-foot wire mesh fences which will remain until the young trees reach a "safe" height of over five feet. At present, the water district strings from 5,000 to 10,000 feet of fence a year, and is thoroughly satisfied with the results.

"We're comfortably off with the deer now," Ron Upward tells me. "They bounce from the wire with no harm to the fence or themselves. We do have a few bear too, though, and when they're travelling, they don't like to change course. When a bear comes to one of our fences he charges straight through, and leaves a second break on the other side of the protected area."

Posts are no problem — the loggers split them from cedar windfalls — and eventually, a nylon mesh still in the experimental stage may replace the metal wire. The nylon would disintegrate in about 10 years, by which time trees are past the stage where they tickle blacktail palates.

The honest hunter has taken many a black eye in recent years because of the antics of a hot-trigger brigade that welcomes the slightest excuse to pepper any and all targets.

In addition to the human casualties these rack up through the idiotic practice of "sound-shooting" at anything that rustles, they also indulge themselves in a wide range of vandal tactics.

Of these, the most noxious is the cruel sort of caper that reduced a reef-bound Newfoundland whale to a mass of infected blubber.

Why they do it, I'll never know — but eventually, the irresponsibles who blast off so wantonly are going to bring about a near if not total ban on sporting firearms.

The Great Centennial Cover-Up

By PETE LOUDON

Beards are in.

General chairman L. J. Wallace of the provincial planning committee says so.

"Beards fit into the general theme of centennial celebrations very well," he said in an interview.

Beards in recent years have been the badge of the beatnik, worn often as a protest against conformity. But not any more.

Beards worn in our centenary of Confederation do honor to our pioneers, he said. He pointed out that many organizations are holding beard-growing contest. And many men are growing them individually, without prompting.

These include university students, civil servants, one member of the legislature, people in all categories.

But so far there isn't a hair to be seen on the chins of any member of the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of British Columbia.

When this was mentioned to Mr. Wallace, Mr. Wallace just said, "Ha."

He quickly went on to say that a provincial beard-growing contest is a major feature of the Williams Lake Stampede on July 1.

We told Mr. Wallace that some beard growers have phoned the Times to say they have been objects of ridicule.

One wife complained that people who josh her husband about his beard do not connect his efforts with the national trend toward honoring our bearded forefathers.

She said his efforts should be given support of the centennial planners. Mr. Wallace has complied with bare-faced enthusiasm.

And the Times artist in the pictures above, has provided Mr. Wallace with a collection of beard styles because he hasn't had time to make a choice.

Anyone deciding to go hairy over beards in Greater Victoria may make dough while they grow. Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a multi-prize contest as a highlight of its annual exhibition and fair in May. Beards must be started since Jan. 1, and entries close May 1.

Pair Injured In One of Two Car Accidents

David Bellamy, 2355 Bellamy, told Colwood RCMP he was blinded by the lights of an oncoming car.

An estimated $1,500 damage was done to the car, police said.

One man suffered a broken foot and another head cuts when their car ran off the Patricia Bay Highway near Amity Tuesday night.

Archie Jones of Sidney and Leonard Norris of Chemainus were treated at Rest Haven Hospital in Sidney. The car was proceeding south on the highway said Sidney RCMP, who are still investigating.

'Company' Man Denies Causing Disturbance

A man who said he was employed "in a manner of speaking" with the Company of Young Canadians, pleaded not guilty today in central court to a charge of causing a disturbance.

Bail was set at $100.

A companion, Phyllis Robertson, 18, of 919 Vancouver St., pleaded guilty to the same charge and was remanded to Feb. 22 for a pre-sentence report.

The two were arrested after "shouting and screaming" was reported on the north side of the 700 block Yates St. at 8:55 p.m. Tuesday.

A city police officer said 25 persons were in the area at the time.

Questioning Venables, Magistrate Ostler asked if he was employed.

"In a manner of speaking," he answered. He said he was on the Victoria staff of the Company of Young Canadians.

Guns Stolen At Airport

Five guns were stolen from the offices of Vancouver Island Helicopters at Victoria International Airport over Monday night, police report.

Four are semi-automatic .22 calibre pistols and another was described as a .32.

Ask The Times

Q. Who have more heart ailments, men or women? V.M.

A. Provincial health department puts men in the lead. In 1965 B.C. hospitals treated 17,022 heart disease cases—56.15 per cent were male and 43.85 per cent female.

Q. What is the salary of a deputy minister in the provincial service? T.H.

A. Some receive $20,000 and some $19,000 plus certain expenses. This is more than the ministers they serve, who receive salaries of $17,500. But their sessional allowances, etc., $6,500 basic, push them ahead again.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problmes. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

Vancouver's Home Stays, Too Costly to Move Here

Captain George Vancouver's home will not be coming to British Columbia.

That's the gist of a letter from G. S. Gibson, deputy agent-general for B.C. in London, England.

Writing to H. P. Plasterer, 340 Island Highway, one of the local residents pushing for purchase of Captain Vancouver's birthplace and the restoration of the home in B.C., Mr. Gibson said the cost would be prohibitive.

The deputy agent-general also said there is some doubt that the King's Lynn house in question was the birthplace of the illustrious sea captain who put B.C. on the map.

'NO RESEMBLANCE'

"There is a small remaining section of what used to be the home of John Vancouver, the captain's father, who was a collector of dues in the borough of King's Lynn. This is in a parlous state of repair, and has been altered over the years so that it now bears no resemblance to its former state," the letter says.

Floor joists have been cut out and replaced by new timbers and the brick walls are so crumbly that even careful demolition would result in irrepairable damage, Mr. Gibson continues.

"The arched doorway shown in B.C. papers of a few days ago is not the door to this building, but was the door of the Friends Meeting House," the letter states.

NO RECORD

While Captain Vancouver undoubtedly spent some of his childhood in the house in question, there is no record to say that he was born there.

"Vancouver senior lived there, and undoubtedly Captain Vancouver likewise, but there is no record to say that he was born there, in the large house, and certainly he would not have been born in the remaining section," Mr. Gibson wrote. "In that day this piece must have been a workshop or storage room."

Even if the house in question was the birthplace of Captain Vancouver, Mr. Gibson stated that the cost of dismantling it and shipping it to B.C. would run between $20,000 and $25,000.

And, he added, that would not include the cost of rebuilding.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, who along with Liberal MLA Alan Macfarlane, had expressed interest in acquiring the historic property for B.C. display, said such a purchase now was "obviously out."

'CADET WITH A DIFFERENCE' REWARDED FOR GOOD CONDUCT

Officer cadet Gerald Kelly was presented today with the Canadian Forces Decoration in a ceremony at Canadian Forces School Venture.

What made the ceremony unusual was that officer cadets are usually newcomers to the services.

And the decoration is awarded for 12 years good conduct service.

It just so happened that Cadet Kelly was accepted for officer training at the same time he completed 12 years with the air force.

Government Violates Ad Laws Says Haynes

And, added B.C. Federation of Labour secretary Ray Haynes, "papers by printing these ads, and not saying to a person we can't print as it is a violation of the act, are also legally responsible."

His comments followed a warning by the B.C. labor department Tuesday that "numerous advertisements in the daily newspapers seeking applicants for employment" contravene the Fair Employment Practices Act.

The department, in a widely-circulated statement, sought the "co-operation of everyone" in complying with the act.

Advertisements by the B.C. Civil Service Commission contain a restriction that only Commonwealth citizens are acceptable.

Recent advertisements use the words "candidates must be Commonwealth citizens" and "applicants must be Commonwealth citizens" and "requires Commonwealth citizenship."

A labor department spokesman confirmed that the government is not legally bound by the Fair Employment Practices Act.

No act passed by the legislature applies to the government unless the act states so.

Under the Fair Employment Practices Act, "no person shall use or circulate any form of application or publish any advertisement in connection with employment" which expresses "any limitation, specification or preference as to the race, religion, color, nationality, ancestry or place of origin of any person."

The labor department said it is "clearly improper," under the legislation to use words such as boy, girl and young and phrases designating exclusive age groups, such as "20 to 30 years."

Mr. Haynes commented it is "about time" the department took some action. The federation had repeatedly asked the government to do this.

New Exam Policy Detailed

Major Cutback Planned In High School Tests

Education Minister Leslie Peterson today announced a new examination policy will be introduced into the province's high schools this June.

The number of subjects in which students will have to write departmental examinations will be severely chopped to the elective subjects and the marks will only constitute half of the final grading.

Grading in required subjects will be handled entirely within the schools.

A special system of grade 12 examination on a voluntary basis will be established to qualify students for government scholarships.

TWO PARTS

These will be in two equal parts, each scored at 100 points.

The first part will encompass questions for students who must take the examination to graduate in their elective subject. The second part will be only for the scholarship candidates with special questions to test their ability in the subject.

Scholarship candidates will write at least two of the two-part examinations but they can write more if they wish and only their best two results will be counted.

"School marks will not enter into this scholarship examination which will be a direct competition among those candidates undertaking it," he said in a speech text prepared for delivery this afternoon in the legislature's budget debate.

Mr. Peterson said the new policy drops all departmental examinations except those "given at the Grade 12 level in the specialties of the academic and technical program.

EXTENSION

"Departmental examinations are therefore restricted to those courses in which the student has selected through his own interests or aims.

"This principle is only an extension of that which started many decades ago. It is possible only because of the increased training and professional development of secondary school staffs."

In addition, he said, even in those courses where departmental examinations will be required, the principle that written testing alone is insufficient to grade a pupil will be observed and the school's own evaluation of the student's work will count for 50 per cent of the final grade.

"In all examinable courses, the school's evaluation of the pupil's work will receive equal consideration with the evaluation on the basis of the departmental examination," he said.

Accredited schools will continue to be designated by the department permitting them "to recommend a proportion of their pupils without departmental examination in those subjects which they would normally write," Mr. Peterson added.

SANDOWN

Man Faces Charge In Fire

A man being held in custody on the Mainland is expected to be charged in connection with the $150,000 fire at Sandown race track last fall.

A former groom at Sandown, the man may be charged with "setting fire to a material likely to set fire" to buildings and property, it was learned.

The Oct. 16 blaze which broke out the night before the last day of the autumn meeting here killed 13 thoroughbred horses.

The B.C. fire marshal, who with RCMP officers and Saanich detectives investigated the fire, said the suspect's name cannot be released until he is formally charged.

RAN AT LARGE

It was first thought to have been caused by an electrical fault but that theory was discounted as the stables had just been rewired at a cost of $20,000.

Buildings at Sandown were insured for their replacement value.

Club Seeks Transfer Of Dates

B.C. Jockey Club will apply to the B.C. Racing Commission to transfer to Vancouver dates for horse racing at Sandown track near Sidney.

This was revealed today by Jack Diamond, co-owner of the jockey club, who announced Tuesday there would be no racing this year at Sandown.

Mr. Diamond's statement came after the Jockey Club and North Saanich council reached an impasse over licence fees and council demands for fire-fighting and sanitary improvements at the track.

Attorney-General Robert Bonner, to whom the Racing Commission is responsible, said he would have to study the application to transfer racing dates to the Mainland "but I would be personally disappointed if racing could not continue on the Saanich Peninsula".

"It has been quite a feature on the local scene, and well received. I would hope that local differences can be ironed out."

NO DECISION

The attorney-general said the government has made no decision to act on representations to lower the 21¼ per cent mutuel tax, the highest in North America.

The budget before the current legislature does not contemplate any lowering of the tax and "I personally would not forecast that it would go down."

The Sandown meet was scheduled to run from Sept. 16 to Oct. 14.

Glen McDonald, chairman of the Racing Commission, declined to comment on the transfer application. But he pointed out that the commission denied a request "a few years ago to transfer the dates to Vancouver."

The commission then told Bill Randall "to go dark" (close Sandown) if he felt Sandown was a losing proposition but that we would not transfer the dates."

However, McDonald admitted that the commission "isn't bound today by yesterday's decision."

"We felt at the time that the dates shouldn't be transferred because it wouldn't be fair to the people of Victoria, the bettors and the people in the industry."

Mr. Diamond said the Jockey Club plans no meetings with the North Saanich council.

New Saanich Bylaw to Curb Roaming Dogs, Pets in Homes

Although no details are being disclosed, the bylaw is expected to take a much tougher attitude towards roaming dogs and their owners and may include restrictions on the number of pets allowed in homes.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said the bylaw "will be coming forward in a matter of some weeks."

Council has taken an increasingly stronger stand against roaming dogs, resulting in a score or more court cases recently.

"Our responsibility is to see Saanich is made safe from stray dogs, dog packs and hounds that are scavengers," he said.

"We must make streets safe for people. Animals must take a definite second place.

'BACK SEAT'

"I like dogs—in their place and under control. I like children and adults much more. In my book, dogs take a very definite back seat."

Under existing regulations, dogs must not be allowed at large unless accompanied and under control of a person or unless they are on a leash.

Dogs must not be allowed on public beaches, parks, commercial areas or public buildings unless on a leash and "no dog shall be allowed to bark persistently so as to disturb the quiet and peace of the neighborhood."

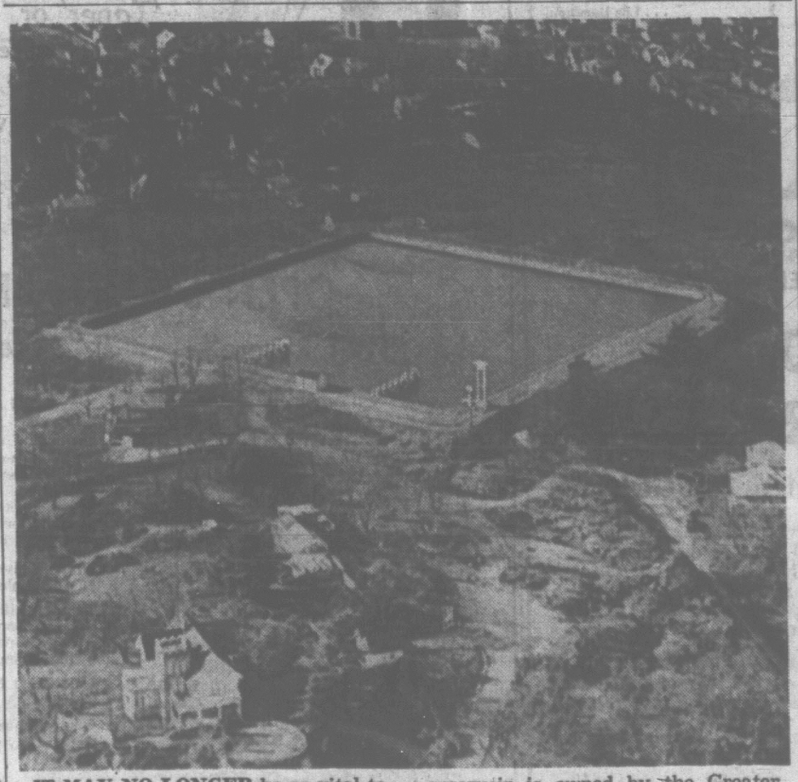

WORRIED

Reeve Curtis said kennel operators and dog fanciers have expressed fears they are "going to be interfered with.

"I have tried to indicate to them the bylaw will be reviewed with people like this and this is what we are aiming at.

"We are after dogs that don't appear to be cared for by owners."

The reeve indicated there will be a strengthening of the pound by adding a second truck.

IT MAY NO LONGER be as vital to Victoria's domestic water supply as it once was, but Smith's Hill reservoir still plays an important role in other ways. The four-acre 18 million gallon water supply is looked on with favor by fire insurance underwriters who state that without that huge reserve, insurance rates would increase. The reservoir is owned by the Greater Victoria Water District but is useful only to the city. At a recent board meeting it was suggested that the city purchase the reservoir from the district—but retain it as a reservoir if for no other purpose than to hold insurance rates down. RCAF Jet Pilot Killed In Crash Near Comox

'...But Definitely Canada Is Bisexual'

OTTAWA (CP)—It probably had to happen.

A movement has been launched for a royal commission on equal status for men.

John Kroeker of Ottawa, who calls himself a former civil servant, actuary and general boat-rocker, said today he sent a Valentine telegram to Prime Minister Pearson Tuesday with the message:

"Whereas in your wisdom you have established a royal commission to examine the question of equality for women and whereas Canada, whether or not it is bicultural, bilingual or binational is definitely bisexual, take note that a petition has been launched to request that you establish forthwith a royal commission to examine the question of equality for men."

The telegram said certain sensitive areas such as employment as bunny waitresses or topless dancers "show marked discrimination verging on total sexclusion of men.

"What man could make a go of gogo?"

Mr. Kroeker was dismissed from his post as an actuary with the federal government after he made statements critical of the Canada Pension Plan.

Federal Loans For Consumer Urged in House

OTTAWA (CP)—A parliamentary committee today recommended that the federal government guarantee low-interest, long-term bank loans for low-income families.

The proposal was included in a wide-ranging report on consumer credit tabled by a joint Senate - Commons committee after more than three years' study.

It said the consumer loans for families with incomes of $4,000 or less were necessary in the war on poverty.

Roundly condemning the credit practices of some businesses, the committee urged full disclosure of all interest and service charges at the time of sale.

The committee urged federal and provincial governments to join in writing the recommendations into law, and in backing them up with adequate inspection and review machinery.

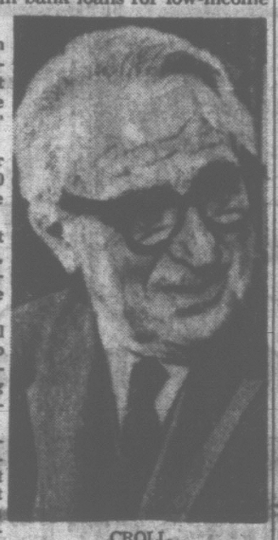

It sharply criticized so-called revolving credit plans operated by many big department stores, in which buyers do not learn until many weeks after a purchase what the monthly carrying charges will be.

"The game appears to be one in which all the cards are in the hands of one player — the seller," the committee said.

Its main recommendation was that "the total cost of credit expressed both as a lump sum and in terms of simple annual interest," be given the user of any time-payment plan at the time of sale.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Senator David Croll (L—Ontario) and Ron Basford (L — Vancouver-Burrard), made the recommendations in a 40,000-word report tabled in both houses of Parliament.

It said consumer credit is a useful facility for purchasers and a growing factor in business, when used properly.

CROLL
. . . bears his stamp

Essential Purchases During Need

In fact, the committee proposed extending the field by having the federal government guarantee bank loans at low rates of interest and long repayment terms for families with incomes of $4,000 and less. This would help them make essential and thrifty purchases in time of great need without incurring the heavy cost of commercial consumer loans.

But the committee came down heavily, and tartly, on consumer loaning practices that might cripple an imprudent buyer.

It did not recommend a specific ceiling on interest rate and service charges, but said the government should consider one. The committee, however, called exorbitant the interest of 18 per cent a year and more involved in some department store revolving credit plans.

Other main recommendations:

- Extend the existing federal Small Loans Act to include loans up to $5,000, instead of $1,500, at low monthly interest rates.
- Extend scope of anti-combines legislation to regulate manufacturers, distributors and dealers of products, such as automobiles, in the operation of their own sales financing concerns.
- Require finance companies to assume obligations to repair and service faulty goods when they buy promissory notes or other retail finance contracts from vendors.
- Allow the buyer three days to reconsider purchases made on credit from canvassers or in other off-store premises.
- Set a maximum rate of interest that may be charged in financing used car purchases, and establish central registries recording the history of each automobile.

Senator Croll the Sparkplug

The committee of 12 senators and 24 MPs was given its assignment to examine the consumer credit field Nov. 8, 1963. It had numerous changes of personnel, but Senator Croll remained its sparkplug throughout and the report showed signs of his energy.

Since jurisdiction in the broad field of consumer credit is divided between the federal government and the provinces by the British North America Act, the committee's recommendations were made generally to all governments. Some provinces now have interest disclosure laws.

Two main problems in the use of consumer credit were emphasized in the 3¼ years of hearings, the report said.

"The first concerns the troubles besetting those who buy on credit without understanding the price they are paying for borrowing.

"The second concerns the plight of low-income families who are from time to time in desperate need of credit for necessary goods or services but to whom commercial credit is either not readily available or not available at all."

The report made repeated reference to the problems of low-income families who become mired in debts from which they can never hope to extricate themselves.

"We recommended that the federal government make available, through the regular banking systems, guaranteed consumer loans under specified conditions to all with annual family incomes of $4,000 or less.

"The loans would be repayable over an extended period and would bear a low rate of interest. They would be made only for provident and produc-

Gas Threat Ended in Big Dock Blaze

PRINCE RUPERT, B.C. (CP)—A $3,000,000 waterfront blaze was brought under control late Tuesday night after firemen used dynamite to choke off the fire that threatened to spread to a $100,000,000 pulp plant.

The blaze at one time threatened to release a deadly cloud of chlorine gas over this northern coastal city, prompting fire officials to issue an evacuation warning that stood for more than an hour.

The warning was called off when powdermen dynamited 1,000 feet of the flaming wharf, preventing the blaze spreading from the 3,000 - foot dock to three chlorine tanks at the pulp mill.

Civil defence authorities said if the fire had reached the tanks they would have exploded and prevailing winds would have carried the gas to Prince Rupert from the Columbia Cellulose Co., site on Watson Island, 12 miles to the east.

Fire chief Willis Hill of Prince Rupert made the decision to order the alert.

"Everybody in Prince Rupert could have been wiped out," he said.

"That chlorine gas is dynamite. It's really dangerous stuff.

"It was a really big blaze. It's the biggest fire here in my memory."

The blaze broke out near a warehouse on the long, narrow company dock late Tuesday afternoon. By the time fire crews arrived, flames were racing toward the landward end and

Hanoi Area Bombed, Says Russian Press

Times News Services

SAIGON—The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Hanoi that American planes bombed areas around the North Vietnamese capital at noon today.

Tass said Hanoi rumbled to the sounds of heavy anti-aircraft guns and bursts of rockets as American planes swept in over the city and bombed and strafed industries and "populated localities" around Hanoi in bright sunshine.

Tass did not say the planes bombed targets inside the city.

(The Pentagon said no targets closer than 35 miles from Hanoi and 15 miles from Haiphong were listed on reports from the Vietnam command today. The targets included barges 15 miles southeast of Haiphong and railroad yards 35 miles south of Hanoi and 45 miles southwest of Haiphong.)

South Korean marines today killed 243 Communist troops in a savage pre-dawn battle, using karate blows to chop down attackers who breached Korean defences.

CHUNG ON VISIT

The battle, staged in ricelands about eight miles northwest of Quang Ngai, 330 miles northeast of Saigon, coincided with the arrival in South Vietnam of South Korean Premier Il Kwon Chung for a four-day official visit.

Meanwhile in Moscow, Pravda accused Washington of deliberate lying when it declared that North Vietnam had shown no desire for a peaceful settlement during the Lunar New Year ceasefire.

American spokesmen justified the renewed bombing by saying they had received no sign that Hanoi wanted to move toward a peaceful settlement, the Communist party daily says.

In a dispatch from Washington, Pravda says President Johnson "had completely ignored Hanoi's proposals" which hinged on the end of bombing raids on the North.

'SAVAGE' SENTENCE PROTESTED

LONDON (CP)—Home Secretary Roy Jenkins has been urged to intervene in the case of a young woman who, convicted of driving while under disqualification, was sentenced to three months—which means she will have an expected baby in jail.

Lillian Baker, 22, burst into tears Tuesday when she received the three-month sentence at Bracknell, Berkshire, for driving while disqualified.

Member of Crack Aerobatics Team

By JIM HUME

A member of the Golden Centennaires flying squad was killed today when his CL41 Tudor jet crashed seven miles southwest of the Comox RCAF base.

The crash on the slopes of Forbidden Plateau, occurred at 12:28 p.m. during a formation manoeuvre involving eight aircraft.

NAME WITHHELD

Air Force officials said the pilot was in his 20s. His name is being withheld pending notification of next of kin.

None of the other seven pilots in the formation saw the aircraft go out of control although one pilot to the rear reported a possibility of trouble after the aircraft disappeared.

The aircraft burst into flames as it struck the ground. The rest of the formation was able to pinpoint the wreck immediately and radio for help.

Heat from the flames was so intense that a helicopter, dispatched to the scene within minutes of the emergency call, was unable to land close to the shattered aircraft.

A spokesman said details were still skimpy as the surviving pilots had not completed their de-briefing.

He said the dead pilot gave some indications of trouble shortly before crashing.

"Something was said on the radio but I can't say just what it was because we don't know yet," he said. "But there was some indication of trouble."

"At present it would appear that two aircraft touched wingtips and that, plus air turbulence, sent the one craft out of control."

The spokesman said he was not sure of the altitude the aircraft were flying but indicated they were in a low level pattern giving the pilot little chance to regain control following the mishap.

The Golden Centennaires are due to appear in Victoria July 19 when they will give an aerobatics display over either Royal Roads or Beacon Hill Park.

Most of the 12-man team has been practising at Comox for the past two months.

The last two members fly a First World War design AVRO 504.

The group, based at Portage la Prairie, has been training on the west coast as part of a program to simulate weather conditions it will encounter during the planned tour.

Moore Returning To Vietnam

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Victor Moore, Canadian representative on the International Control Commission, has returned to Saigon after talks in Ottawa.

His mission is to keep open the channel of access to Hanoi, it was learned here today.

His return to Vietnam Saturday was a surprise development. Earlier it had been announced he had completed 14 months in Vietnam, his tour of duty, and his successor will be Ormond Dier, who is scheduled to proceed to Saigon on March 1.

With Mr. Martin convinced the time is "ripe" to push ahead with negotiations to try and bring an end to the fighting, Mr. Moore was sent back and will be there until his successor is ready to take up the assignment.

Mr. Moore's return to Saigon was one more development in the strenuous behind-the-scenes efforts External Affairs Minister Martin has been making to get the combatants to the bargaining table.

BENNETT SAYS:

'No Opting Out' On Hospitals

By JOHN MIKA
Times Legislative Reporter

Premier Bennett Tuesday night confirmed that regional districts will be created throughout British Columbia unilaterally by the government to build hospitals.

"They will be set up exactly like school districts—and there'll be no opting out," he told reporters after he announced in the legislature that legislation will be forthcoming at this session.

Mr. Bennett warned the legislature that "there will be a little moaning and gnashing of teeth as there was when the school districts were set up."

But just as the 1945 Cameron report found that all municipal school boards had to be combined into present school districts "they (regional hospital districts) have all got to be in or the whole thing will collapse."

He recalled that Herbert Anscomb, former Coalition finance minister from Oak Bay, bitterly opposed inclusion of Oak Bay in the Greater Victoria school district and the same sort of opposition was repeated in other areas.

CIA Paid Millions to Students

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency has supplied millions of dollars in secret financial support to at least three youth organizations in addition to the National Student Association, the Evening Star reports.

The state department acknowledged Tuesday that the government's top espionage and intelligence agency had for more than a decade financed operations abroad by the NSA, the largest college student organization in the United States.

But the reported CIA support of the other three groups had not previously been disclosed. The Star identifies the organization as the U.S. Youth Council, a confederation of 36 political, religious, student and service youth groups with headquarters in New York; the World Assembly of Youth, a confederation of national youth groups from 54 Western and non-aligned nations; and the International Student Conference of Leiden, Netherlands, a similar confederation of about 60 national student organizations from Western and non-aligned nations.

The newspaper says CIA funds for those organizations, totalling millions of dollars during more than a decade, were channelled through foundations. It identifies the principal donor to NSA and the three other groups as the Foundation for Youth and Student Affairs in New York.

The CIA had no immediate comment on The Star story.

The report of additional CIA support came amid protests and demand in Congress for a prompt investigation of the agency's ties with NSA.

In another development, the New York Times said President Johnson intervened in the controversy and instructed the CIA Tuesday to close out all secret programs of aid to student groups. A White House spokesman denied the report.

Within the four organizations, The Star article said, the members carried on a limited amount of intelligence work for the CIA.

tive purpose related to the preservation of home and family. The maximum size of such a loan would be $1,500."

The proposal, the committee said, would help in the fight against poverty by relieving vulnerable low-income families from tremendous economic, social and psychological loads.

It also recommended budget advice and counselling in money management for all potential credit buyers.

This would include illustrations of debt consolidation, reasonable debt positions for low-income individuals, safe levels for credit buying according to income, and the nature and extent of consumer protection under the law.

Financing of used cars has become a social problem, the committee said. It cited cases of family breadwinners committing themselves to time payments for cars that won't run, and having no recourse against the sellers.

"Although we have not decided on any specific annual interest rate in respect of credit transactions which would in all circumstances be considered exorbitant, it would appear to be in the public interest to fix some such upper limit," the report said.

"Because of the tremendous increase in recent years in the use of open-end accounts of various types — sometimes called revolving accounts, cyclical accounts, easy-payment of budget accounts—with no statement to the customer of the annual interest rate at the time the purchase is made, and with a minimum effective annual interest rate of some 18 per cent, but no effective ceiling, we urge that immediate consideration be given to this important matter.

Accounting 'Mystery" a Danger

"An accounting system which is clothed in mystery is a potential danger to those of limited income."

Department store and other retail executives appearing before the committee said the revolving accounts are popular with customers and more economical to operate for the stores.

But they said it was impossible to quote a specific rate of interest applicable, since the accounts can run along for years as long as some monthly payments are made and new purchases added to the accounts.

The Croll-Basford committee, currently engaged in a study of consumer prices and economic trends, said in an interim report on prices in December that there should be a continuing committee of the Senate and Commons to review consumer affairs and the state of the Canadian economy.

There also should be a continuing federal-provincial committee of government technical experts to maintain uniformity of consumer credit law and eliminate abuses and loopholes in it.

Among more technical recommendations, the committee said there should be a standard form of agreement drawn up by some government agency and distributed to all dealers and reatilers, establishing basic rules for all sales of goods on credit. A copy should be given to every purchaser.

Allow Full Payment Before Term

Every user of retail credit should have the right to pay off his debt before the agreed term, without penalty and with proportionate rebate of prepaid service charges.

Collection agencies should be regulated and supervised to prevent harassment of the poor and unsophisticated.

Agencies should be prohibited from obtaining wage assignments from debtors. And debtors should give credit grantors wage assignments only in self-contained documents separate from the sales contract.

Reviewing the testimony given in 19 public hearings, the committee said that about 20 per cent of Canadians had incomes below the level at which they could affofd commercial loans of consumer credit.

But consumer credit was more likely to be required by lower-income groups, and there was a danger they would become mired in debt.

It said that nearly 75 per cent of the business done by finance companies is with people who already are in debt to a small loan company or other lender.

Through refinancing and debt-consolidation deals, interest payments can pyramid. The committee found that borrowers actually receive in cash little more than one-third of the amounts debited to their accounts, and for which they are liable.

The committee said consumer credit outstanding at the end of 1965, the latest year for which it had full figures, amounted to $7,000,000,000, compared with $678,000,000 in 1948. The amount is increasing annually, as a percentage of personal net incomes and ratio to gross national product.

mier said that the coalition government precipitated some of the controversy by establishing the school districts without first creating a financing authority for them to sell bonds in the money markets.

He said the Social Credit government overcame much of the lingering opposition in 1954 by creating the school construction financing authority. The government hopes to head off some of the reaction against the regional districts by its announcement last week that a hospital construction financing authority will be established with an improved provincial sharing formula for the new regional districts.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who previously denied there would be any compulsion attached to the new regional hospital districts, maintained his position.

He said the premier's reference to no opting out referred only to the establishment of regional districts as geographical units but local ratepayers would still have to approve acceptance of a hospital construction function for such districts by a referendum.

VOTE AGAIN

After that, they still would have a vote on each hospital construction program just as they do with school construction programs.

He said that probably 25 to 30 regional districts would be formed initially but ultimately the entire province would be carved up into regional districts. The regional boards would be composed as now of representatives from components who hold elected office.

There now are 11 voluntarily-established regional districts—including Greater Victoria—and five of them have hospital construction as one of their functions.

Both Mr. Bennett and Mr. Campbell said the government has not decided yet whether the 11 existing regional districts will remain intact or whether they will be reconstituted as rearranged units.

Mr. Bennett emphasized that "in my mind there is no other purpose than hospital construction just as there is only school construction in the school districts.

"But they could be used for other things if the people wanted—that's up to them. I have no other thing in my mind at this time."

The regional districts would not necessarily have the same boundaries as school districts, although some might, he said.

On average, they will not necessarily be larger than school districts either although there will be fewer than half of the present 87 school districts.

He said the regional district legislation will be complex and it will be some time before it is prepared, but it will be brought in at this session.

However, the legislation setting up the hospital financing authority will be brought in soon because this is primarily a paper device for dealing with the bond market.

He said he hoped the financing authority would be able to raise funds for hospital construction projects already under way "where they have been financing by bank borrowings and have not yet floated bonds of their own."

The premier said it was difficult to estimate how much funding the financing authority would undertake in its first year of operation but he guessed "about $25 million."

Besides construction, he said regional districts could use the financing authority to raise money to buy private hospitals so they could qualify as public chronic care institutions for the $1-a-day B.C. Hospital Insurance coverage.

Mr. Bennett said the bond issues funnelled through the hospital financing authority would grow because the new formula would cut local contributions from 44 to 40 or even 20 per cent, depending on the scope of a hospital program and the mill rate needed to raise the local share.

overseas representatives and similar reports on foreign student or youth leaders visiting the United States would be forwarded to the agency, it added.

Eight Democrats in the U.S. House of Representatives Tuesday urged an inquiry "at the highest level" into the CIA's support—estimated at $200,000 a year during most of the last decade—of NSA, a 1,300,000 member group with affiliations at 300 campuses.

Chairman Sam Brown and other members of the NSA supervisory board flew to Washington for an emergency meeting. Brown said Tuesday night it "comes as a shock" to find the board was "only the policy-making body on the secondary level."

Asked who was the top policy-making body, he said: "The CIA."

The Washington Post quotes an unidentified association official as saying: "Every year the CIA picked out a man or two that it could trust and told them about the undercover funding" of the association. The source said some of these young men later joined the CIA, often acting as liaison agents to the student group.

Last spring the CIA was accused of infiltrating a Michigan State University police training program in Vietnam. University officials denied knowing about it but ended the contract because of the suspicion aroused.

In Baltimore last December, a federal court dismissed a $110,000 slander suit against a CIA agent, declaring he could not be forced to testify because it might compromise national security.

The claimant, Erik Heine, a naturalized Canadian from Toronto, said his standing in an Estonian veterans organization had been damaged by a CIA man who allegedly called him an agent of the Soviet secret police.

The CIA's link to the National Student Association was brought to the surface Tuesday through newspaper advertisements by Ramparts magazine calling attention to a story on the relationship in its March issue.

Spokesmen for the association and the state department later confirmed the secret pact. Allen W. Dulles, who headed the CIA when the link was forged, said it was a response to widespread Communist influence in student organizations abroad during the early 1950s.

MAO ENEMIES SEEKING SOVIET AID

HONG KONG (UPI) — The Hong Kong Star said today a top Red Chinese general has been holding secret talks with Russia on possible Soviet aid to forces opposing Mao Tse-tung.

The Star, a sensational English-language newspaper, identified the Chinese general as Gen. Kwok Pang, a chief aide to Gen. Wang En-Mao, military commander of the northwestern Chinese province of Sinkiang, where Peking's nuclear arsenal is stored.

Wage Offer Accepted

MONTREAL (CP) — About 5,000 striking manual workers employed by the City of Montreal today voted to accept wage increases ranging from 63 cents to $1.22 an hour in a one-year contract. The men also agreed to return to work later today, ending a five-day strike.

INCIDENCE OF LUNG CANCER 'NATIONAL DISASTER'

WCB Can't Pay Miners' Claims

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—A government - appointed review committee, which studied the Workmen's Compensation Act, has termed the lung cancer incidence among Flourspar miners at St. Lawrence, Nfld., a "national disaster" and called for the "fullest possible investigation."

The report, tabled in the legislature, said it heard an "extraordinary" brief from Rennie Slaney of St. Lawrence, a miner for 20 years, in which he relates "ghastly" figures of 84 deaths among miners in the Burin Peninsula community of 2,000.

About a dozen of the deaths were due to heart disease and the remainder were attributed to lung ailments, the report says.

"According to him (Mr. Slaney), in only some 25 cases has any compensation to dependants been paid. He gives also another list headed 'those alive and unable to work.' It contains 13 names and he says that in six cases compensation was paid."

Irving Fogwell, chairman of the compensation board, told the committee he had recorded 34 deaths from lung cancer among the miners and about 20 due to other lung diseases between 1952 and 1965.

However, "cases that occurred before 1951 are not included."

". . . But it seems to use those given by Mr. Slaney are much nearer the truly ghastly total than the 50 odd in the board's files."

The committee said "the only recommendation we feel we can make in the regard is that the act be ignored altogether and forgotten. The tragedy of St. Lawrence, in its very dimensions and character, has far exceeded the sphere and scope of the act. On the ground of cost alone, it is impossible to apply it.

"If every claim that has really been created were evaluated, the assessment of all the industries in Newfoundland, not merely the mining industry, would be insufficient. The whole accident fund simply could not bear it.

100 Labor MPs Protest U.S. Move

LONDON (Reuters) — One hundred Labor MPs called on the British government Tuesday to dissociate itself from the United States' resumption of bombing of North Vietnam.

Apparently not satisfied by a speech by Labor Prime Minister Wilson to the 630-seat Commons that peace could not be obtained by "dramatic declarations," the motion put before the House read:

"This House condemns renewed U.S. bombing of North Vietnam which so flagrantly undermines the peace initiatives of U Thant, UN Secretary General, and calls upon the government unequivocally to dissociate the United Kingdom from this action."

Observers doubted the motion would reach the floor.

U.K., MALTA DISPUTE BLOCKS QUEEN'S VISIT

LONDON (AP)—The Queen has called off an official visit to Malta in the face of bitterness against Britain's plans to cut forces based on the Mediterranean island, it was learned early today.

Court sources said arrangements for the Queen and Prince Philip to visit Malta in May were shelved at the initiative of the Maltese government.

It was believed to be the first time that a political dispute within the Commonwealth has forced the Queen to abandon an official visit to a member country.
